Storm Rises Over Naming Justice After Adjournment

Attorney General Rules President May Choose During Recess.

Vandenberg Asks Time to Confirm

Holds 'Sense of Senate' Violated; Is Blasted by Connally.

By Robert C. Albright.

An Attorney General's opinion that President Roosevelt can fill the present Supreme Court vacancy after Congress adjourns precipitated yesterday a new Senate tempest on the still volatile court issue.

The oral storm was touched off by a resolution introduced by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, to make it "the sense of the Senate" that court appointments should be made in time for the Senate to act before a judge takes the bench.

Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, told the Senate he would vote against confirmation of any justice named after Congress adjourned.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, coleader with Burke of court-plan opposition forces, said no "self-respecting lawyer would accept an appointment and then wait to be confirmed by the Senate."

Connally Assails "Dictating."

But Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who took the floor to assail Vandenberg's effort to place the Senate on record against a recess appointment, declared the Senate has no right to tell the President what to do.

"I am just as much opposed to the Senate dictating to the President as the President dictating to the Senate," said Connally, who broke with other court-plan opponents on the issue.

"Of course it would be more desirable in any case to submit the nomination while the present Senate is in session. But that's not for me to say. It is a matter for the President.

"We've got a remedy," Connally continued. "We meet in January. If the appointment is made illegally, if it is improvident, if the appointee is not capable of performing his functions or has no standards of conduct, we can reject the nomination."

Barkley Cites Precedents.

Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley joined Connally in citing precedents for recess appointments, and in charging Vandenberg offered his resolution only to "make the headlines." But Burke and Wheeler insisted it was "no light matter" and virtually called on the President to make his appointment before adjournment.

The issue was raised early in the day with a White House announcement that Attorney General Cummings believed President Roosevelt could name a successor to Justice Willis Van Devanter, retired June 2, whether Congress was in session, in recess or adjourned.

The President had requested Cummings' opinion, Stephen Early, White House secretary, said Cummings' opinion was based both on precedent and on law. He said the opinion was asked to clear away doubts expressed in some quarters.

Vandenberg offered his resolution soon after the Senate met and asked that it "lie on the table." It can be called up at any time by a formal motion.

Constitution Involved.

The Michigan Senator said "manifestly the Senate cannot remain a free agent to confirm court nominees if it cannot act until after a nominee has served many months on the court. It is one thing to reject a nominee and another thing to remove a justice who has started to serve."

The issue turned on conflicting interpretation of a Constitutional provision that the President may fill vacancies that "happen" while Congress is in recess. Opponents of a recess appointment contend this means vacancies that "occur" while Congress is in recess. Cham-

D.C. Heads Accept Hooe's Resignation In Favoritism Row

The long-rumored resignation of Rice Hooe, assistant corporation counsel in charge of Police Court prosecutions, was accepted yesterday by the Commissioners.

Hooe's resignation was requested by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal several months ago following reported irregularities within the Police Court prosecutor's office. "Favoritism" in handling traffic cases was charged.

Although Hooe repeatedly denied intentions of resigning, he requested and was granted a hearing before the Commissioners several weeks ago. At that time, officials said his resignation would be "taken under advisement."

The resignation, it was reported, will become effective September 1. Hooe, according to reports, will enter private law practice.

Seal would not predict yesterday who would be assigned to the important Police Court post. Among prominent candidatse is George Neilson, young assistant prosecutor who has established a record for traffic convictions before Police Court juries.

2 Girls Fatally Injured by 5-Story Fall Into Crevice

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Two New York schoolgirls died in a hospital last night of injuries suffered in a five-story plunge into a 10-inch crevice between buildings. Rescuers removed Marilyn Murphy, 10, by chopping a hole into the wall (above), while an interne risked his life by being lowered between the buildings by a rope to remove Lorraine Chinchar, 9. The girls, attempting to climb from the roof of Marilyn's apartment to the next building, crashed through wire netting, thinly covered with roofing material, between the roofs of the two buildings.

Steamer Blaze Began in Sugar, Inquiry Hears

City of Baltimore Watchman Tells of Trouble With Fire Hose.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 2.—Frank Barnes, watchman aboard the bay steamer City of Baltimore, told a Federal inquiry board today that the disastrous fire which destroyed the ship and cost three lives started in bags of sugar that burned as though "someone had thrown gasoline" on them.

"One of the sailors called to me: 'God, there's a fire,'" Barnes said. "The blaze was licking along the edge of one of the bottom sugar bags. I jumped for it and stamped it out.

"One sailor helped me and we got that blaze out without any trouble. But in two minutes, halfway between the front and midships gangway, some seven or eight feet from where I was standing, fire shot up from the top of the sugar like someone had thrown gasoline on it."

Watchman Gives Alarm.

Barnes said he had inspected cargo amidships and was walking forward on the freight deck. He had been gone about three minutes, he told the board, composed of J. F. Staley, Department of Justice attorney; Comdr. H. N. Perlman, of the Coast Guard, and Eugene Carlson.

Barnes threw up his arms to emphasize the suddenness of the second blaze. He said he saw the fire was serious, called an alarm to the pilot house, and hauled out a fire hose. No water came from it, he said, but the second mate arrived and turned on the sprinkler system.

Barnes said he thought he saw the sprinkler working in the after section of the ship, but was not certain about the system up forward. He turned on a second hose, but was driven back in a few minutes by flames and smoke which enveloped the entire ship.

Fire in the hearing room interrupted proceedings at one point. Smelling acrid smoke, Capt. Paul Tyler, of the local Marine Inspection Board, stopped the hearing until a spectator put out a fire in a cuspidor.

Second Officer Called.

Second Officer Ernest R. Horseley, of Baltimore, followed Barnes to the stand and testified water came out of the sprinkler system, but "I don't know how much or how long—I was too busy trying to get water out of the hose."

Rival Crews Labor in Night To Rush Tracks to Bridge Goal

Even Foremen Profess Not to Understand Object of Feverish Efforts by P. R. R. and Central of New Jersey to Be First at Span Not Yet Built.

By the Associated Press.

Linden, N. J., Aug. 2.—Two rival railroad gangs worked at top speed tonight laying parallel tracks in a race that even the foremen professed not to understand.

Way in the lead were the Central Railroad of New Jersey workmen, forging ahead with a permanent, ballasted line rapidly approaching a State highway which skirts the booming meadowland industrial district.

Thousands of ties behind was the Pennsylvania Railroad crew feverishly laying tracks that jutted, zig-zagged and climbed over mounds. Their track snaked ahead at almost 400 feet an hour, as fresh shifts frequently provided spurts.

A bridge over the highway—a bridge that may or may not be built—was reported the goal in the race that railroad officials said they know nothing about.

Across this mythical bridge lie the busy industrial plants and a large industrial area recently thrown open for sale.

Some say the race started when railroad lawyers gave the opinion that the first railroad to reach the highway would have prior claim to cross the highway with a bridge.

Both railroads have lines into the industrial area from the opposite side of the highway, but hookups from the side of the present activity were said to be vital.

The Central Railroad workmen have been at work quite some time on the permanent line, but little activity by the Pennsylvania was seen before 400 men climbed out of 45 autos and trucks at 2 a. m. today, trained headlights on the tall grass, and broke the early morning calm with the pounding of sledge hammers on spikes.

Columbia Cabs Ordered to Quit District Streets

Van Duzer Acts After Learning Lack of Insurance.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Members of the Columbia Cab Association—52 drivers and their taxis—were ordered off Washington streets by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic yesterday after it was revealed the association carried no liability insurance.

Acting under the District financial responsibility act, the Traffic Department suspended indefinitely all license plates and permits used by the association and its drivers. The order, signed by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, followed a $350 Municipal Court judgment against the cab concern, it was reported.

According to Edward R. Deane, chief of the Traffic Department's financial responsiblity division, the Columbia Association will not be permitted to resume operations until the judgment has been paid and

Flood-Control Pact Opposed By Roosevelt

By William V. Nessly.

Disapproval by President Roosevelt, in its present form, of the four-State compact for flood control in New England was announced yesterday by Representative Herman P. Kopplemann, (Democrat), Connecticut, after a White House visit.

"The President is opposed to acceptance of the compact," he said, "unless Congress reserves to the Federal Government all power rights arising from any reservoirs or dams built at Federal expense. The power rights of such projects must remain in control of the Federal Government."

Taking his stand with the President, Kopplemann agreed that the bill accepting the compact, as now written, "would take from the people for 999 years" the power rights in the Connecticut River program and leave them with the States.

"And," he added, "the utility interests control the States."

The Representative took his posi-

Plane Falls Apart, Breaks Pilot's Leg; 'Chute Saves Him

Mount Clemens, Mich., Aug. 2 (AP). Lieut. Donald H. Kauffman, 23, suffered a broken leg when he was thrown against an instrument panel just before his plane fell apart today, but he was able to pull the rip cord of his parachute and land safely in a field near here.

He lost two teeth and suffered a bruised chin.

A Selfridge Field flier, attached to the Ninety-fourth Pursuit Squadron, Kauffman was practicing regulation acrobatics at 6,500 feet when his plane failed to come out of a barrel roll. He tried to right it with a 200-mile-an-hour power dive and both wings fell off. He said the next thing he knew he was in midair.

"I saw the ship heading down below me and the two wings floating by in opposite directions," he said. "Then I pulled the rip cord."

Two Fliers Killed When Planes Crash Preparing to Land

Los Angeles, Aug. 2 (AP).—Two men were killed and two critically injured in a collision of two airplanes preparing to land at Dycer airport here tonight.

Chester O. Powers, 24, a private pilot, and his passenger, Harry Allen Wigley, were killed as Powers' plane locked wings with a biplane, witnesses told police.

Frank Jamison, 31, of Beverly Hills, owner and pilot of the biplane, and Joe Vierling, 36 a student pilot with him, were injured.

Witnesses said the planes came together at a height of about 300 feet.

Gingerbread for Boston Debs? Applesauce, They Get Only Milk!

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 2.—Boston social arbiters were divided between indignation and derision tonight over the statement of Ted Saucier of New York's Waldorf-Astoria that debutante parties here were "unusual" with gingerbread, applesauce and milk as chief portions of the menus.

Discussing the approaching debutante season in New York, Saucier was quoted as asserting Boston was "probably the most unusual place for a coming out party from the standpoint of food."

"In Boston it's still the quaint old custom for the elders to consider debs and their guests as children," Saucier was quoted as saying. "Instead of lavish suppers, they get only applesauce, gingerbread and milk."

Try as they might, Boston social leaders could not recall any applesauce or gingerbread at any of their parties.

Milk? Well, that's something else again. Scores of the young men guests at Boston's deb parties are from nearby schools and colleges and many of them are ath-

Hour, Pay Bill Of House Due To Die Today

Milder Senate Proposal to Be Substituted, Is Prediction.

Objection of Southerners Is Expected to Be Overcome.

By Sidney Olson.

By noon today, the broad and far-reaching House wages-hours bill will have been killed in committee and the text of the milder Senate bill substituted in its stead, House leaders predicted privately last night.

Southern opposition in the House then is scheduled to fold up quickly, if not quietly, with swift and certain passage to follow next week, when the bill is sent to the floor by the House Rules Committee. Passage of the Senate bill also would obviate a fight in conference and make adjournment in three weeks nearly certain, leaders observed.

The leaders indorsed the stand taken by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, who will move today to substitute the Senate text for the present House wage bill. This motion will eliminate the highly controversial amendment sponsored by Representative Reuben T. Wood (Democrat), Missouri, which allows fixing of minimum wages as high as 70 cents an hour, and a work week as low as 35 hours, with authority for a Labor Standards Board to make exemptions in deserving cases.

Southerners Aroused.

Southerners in the House, aroused to the fighting point, pledged themselves in an almost unbroken mass to battle against the House bill so long as it contains the Wood amendment, as they swore it would kill Southern industry.

In order to insure success of the Ramspeck motion to substitute the Senate bill today, leaders yesterday urged six committee members, who were absent when the amendment was voted on, to be present for today's session and to vote for the motion. Five of the six are "in the bag," it was said in cloakroom conversation yesterday.

When the Wood amendment was adopted, the committee split evenly, 7 to 7, until Chairman Mary T. Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, voted for the amendment, breaking the tie. The full committee membership is 21, and unless last night's indications fail, enough members will be present today to carry Ramspeck's motion.

Ramspeck said yesterday:

"The present House bill would never pass the House. The Senate bill will pass the House without great difficulty."

Rankin Heads Die-Hards.

Numerous Southerners, as well as the leadership, confirmed this prophecy, although a few die-hards, headed by Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat,) of Mississippi, intend to battle to the last against any bill of either character on wages and hours.

The Ramspeck motion, it was believed, is part of the new "speed-up strategy" adopted by the majority leaders of both Houses, in which the full power of the Democratic majority will be focused swiftly on one after another of the President's measures, with adjournment in three weeks agreed on, always barring sudden emergence of an unexpected issue.

Spaker William B. Bankhead told reporters he thought the wages-hours bill that came out of the Labor Committee would be given a rule by the Rules Committee by the end of the week. Rules Chairman John O'Connor, of New York, announced that due to committee absentees a ruling could not be obtained until next week.

Fire-Eater Burned When Boy Brings Gasoline by Error

Because a monkey upset a can of kerosene he was using in his fire-eating act, and because a small boy didn't know the difference between gasoline and kerosene, Will Fields, carnival performer, was in Alexandria Hospital last night suffering from first degree burns about his face.

Fields was in the midst of his act, which is an attraction at the Smith Greater Atlantic Show, now operating near Alexandria, when a monkey chained to the stage upset his supply of kerosene.

Determined not to disappoint his audience, who had paid to see him swallow burning torches saturated with kerosene, Fields sent a small boy spectator to a nearby store for another supply. The boy returned with a can of gasoline, and Fields, not knowing the change, attempted to light one of his torches.

The gas exploded in Fields' face with a terrific roar.

Notes of Friendship Exchanged By Mussolini and Chamberlain

Personal Messages Believed to Have Opened New Phase of Anglo-Italian Relations, Removing Dangerous Cause of Friction in Europe.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 2.—An exchange of personal messages of friendship between the heads of the British and Italian governments was believed tonight to have opened a new phase of Anglo-Italian relations, possibly removing one of Europe's most dangerous friction points.

A letter from Premier Mussolini to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain was delivered today to complete the exchange. Chamberlain sent his communication to Mussolini Saturday.

Relations between Italy and Britain have been cool in recent years, at times badly strained, because of the conflict of interests in the Mediterranean and the Red Sea and a series of diplomatic issues.

British officials expressed belief this might be ended now.

Anti-British feeling mounted in Italy when Great Britain championed sanctions in 1935 against the Italian campaign in Ethiopia.

Italy, in concert with European Fascist nations, has been on the opposite side of council tables from Britain, aligned with the democratic governments, in controversies over non intervention in Spain.

Mussolini's reply to Chamberlain was delivered by Count Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to London.

Contents of the letter were not disclosed but authoritative sources said it was "couched in cordial tones and reciprocated the tone of Chamberlain's message to Mussolini."

Chamberlain's letter had been interpreted generally as a frank gesture of Italy that Great Britain would welcome her friendship.

Authoritative sources said the exchange of notes opened the way for further Anglo-Italian negotiations and may have made possible a new four-power pact to replace the defunct Locarno Treaty.

Officials hinted that treaty discussions may be resumed next month when Parliament reconvenes after the summer recess and cabinet ministers return to London.

Neither No. 10 Downing street nor the foreign office, however, would confirm or deny reports in some quarters that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden planned to see Mussolini.

Better feeling was enhanced also by an announcement that Italian newspapermen, withdrawn from London before the coronation of King George VI, would return. Rome boycotted British news because some British newspapers sneered at the fighting qualities of Italian troops in Spain.

Sullivan Named New Leader of Tammany Hall

East Side Representative Is Chosen Unanimously in Factional Coup.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—Tammany Hall achieved outward harmony today by the unanimous selection of Representative Christopher D. Sullivan (Democrat), New York, of the Thirteenth New York District, as its leader.

Whether the East Side Representative, chosen for the post vacated by the death of James J. Dooling, would be able to bring together factions split over New Deal support and selection of a mayoralty candidate in the Democratic primary remained a subject of speculation.

Sullivan's selection by the executive committee came as a result of a coup by County Clerk Albert Marinelli, leader of the Second Assembly District, who obtained the votes necessary to force today's meeting over the opposition of Acting Leader William P. Kenneally.

Kenneally, identified with the group led by James J. Hines, of the Eleventh Assembly District, sought to postpone selection of a successor to Dooling until after the primary.

The Hines group, which supported Grover A. Whalen for mayor and has been sympathetic toward New Deal policies, was reported in advance of today's meeting as prepared to support Stephen A. Ruddy for Tammany leader.

Ruddy, one of those selected by Dooling along with Sullivan to handle Tammany affairs during his illness, helped to make United States Senator Royal S. Copeland the Tammany designee for mayor, but was regarded as preferred by this faction over Sullivan. There was talk, too, of an effort to have both Copeland favored candidate of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, and Whalen withdraw in favor of a compromise candidate.

No one except Sullivan was nominated at today's election, and the new leader said that there was no plan to find a compromise mayoralty candidate, and that Copeland positively would not withdraw from the race.

Sullivan, born in New York, is 67.

Ban Is Sought On Pickets at U. S. Buildings

House, Senate Are Given Similar Plans for Embassies.

Sponsored by the Department of Justice, a joint resolution to prohibit the picketing of Government buildings was introduced in the House late yesterday.

Representative Vincent L. Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the House District Committee, who dropped the resolution in the hopper, said it had been suggested by the Department of Justice. He said he supposed it was aimed at striking painters, who recently have been picketing the Internal Revenue Building.

Another joint resolution was introduced by Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which would prohibit picketing of foreign embassies and legations. The Italian and German embassies have been picketed on and off for the last year or more.

Three Measures Similar.

The language in the McRoynolds resolution and in a resolution introduced in the Senate by Chairman Key Pittman, of the Foreign Relations Committee—was very much the same as that in the Palmisano resolution.

Apparently an attempt is to be made to jam the resolutions through both houses before adjournment, for Palmisano called a special meeting of the House District Committee for 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning to consider his resolution.

A stormy session would seem to be in prospect.

The Palmisano resolution says it shall be unlawful "to display any flag, banner or device, designed or adapted to bring into public notice any party, organization or movement, or the political, social or economic views or purposes of any individual or group" within 500 feet of any public building.

The penalty for violations would be a fine of $100 or 60 days in jail, or both.

The resolution says that no such demonstrations shall be lawful unless a permit is obtained from the superintendent of police, but it ap-

Whoopee Tree That Yields Wine Found by Explorer in Jungles

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug 2.—A titillating tale of trees that yield "luscious red wine" was brought back from the tropical jungles of lower Mexico today by Llewelyn Williams, curator of botany at the Field Museum.

He spent six months exploring the wild region but returned with the largest collection of wood specimens ever gathered there as a reward for trying treks through forest lands infested by snakes, jaguars and mosquitoes which "worked" day and night shifts.

The "whoopee" tree is a species of palm. The natives chop it down, cut a small hole in the trunk, cover it with leaves and let it stand for two days. When they return, the trough is filled with a red wine, formed from fermentation of the sap.

Williams called it "delicious."

He also told of trees which "murder" other trees in dense over-growths where trees and plants, pushing up toward the life-giving sunlight, seem engaged in a "survival of the fittest" battle. The "murderous" higua-amate tree, which grows only upon other trees,

Japan Held Responsible for Seizing Records in Tientsin.

Chinese Hoping For Intervention

Both Sides Rushing Reinforcements for Major Battle.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Tientsin (Tuesday), Aug. 3.—Russia was drawn into the North China crisis today when Moscow ordered its embassy in Tokyo to protest strongly to the Japanese government against a raid on the Soviet consulate general here during which the building was wrecked and the consular archives confiscated.

Moscow asserted the imperial Japanese government was responsible for the raid and demanded "satisfaction," including arrest of the raiders, return of the seized consular records, and compensation.

The protest followed similar action by Russian Ambassador Dmitri Bogomoloff in Nanking, who told the Japanese charge d'affaires there that the Japanese army connived in the raid.

[In Moscow, Japan's Ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu, told the foreign office that his nation could not be expected to comply with the Russian demands, the Associated Press reported. He said his government disclaimed any responsibility for the raid.—Editor's note.]

Russians feared all Soviet institutions in North China were to be closed by the Japanese in line with their program of eradicating all Soviet and Communist influences from areas under their control.

Chinese hoped the incident might lead to Russian military intervention, but there was no indication that Moscow planned such action.

Major Crisis Developing.

The whole North China war—which has raged intermittently since July 7—appeared moving rapidly toward a major crisis.

Fighting spread into Chahar and Shantung provinces and both Chinese and Japanese continued to pour reinforcements into the major battle line which was forming north of the Yellow River.

A Japanese military spokesman admitted that one or more divisions of the central Chinese government's armies had moved from Tatung, Shansi Province, into Chahar, and occupied the important city of Kalgan, which long has been in Japan's sphere of influence.

The acting Japanese consul at Kalgan has fled to Dolomor, on the border of the Japan controlled State of Manchukuo.

The central government forces which invaded Chahar are commanded by Gen. Tang En-Po who apparently has reached an understanding with the heretofore pro-Japanese Provincial chairman, Liu Ju-Ming.

The spokesman hoped that Liu will not abandon his friendship for Japan but admitted that his attitude for some time has been "growing provocative."

Japanese Worried.

There was one report that Japanese planes bombed Kalgan yesterday but the spokesman refused to comment on it.

Foreign military attaches said the Russian and Chahar developments brought Japan face to face with a situation which may force her to send huge reinforcements from home. The area which the Japanese army is required to control now is assuming such size that "more than 100,000 men will be needed," one attache said.

Worry was apparent at Japanese general military headquarters here but the Japanese continued to advance on all fronts.

Japanese motorized columns drove southward toward Tsangchow to head off concentrations of the Chinese Central government in that strategic city.

Three trainloads of Central government troops reached Tsangchow, 60 miles south of Tientsin, during the night and moved into positions behind remnants of Gen. Sung Cheh-yuan's Twenty-ninth Army, which were re-formed at Machang after being driven from the Peiping area by Japanese.

Japanese air scouts, who reported the movement, said the Chinese were building elaborate trench systems.

Gen. Kiyoshi Katsuki, Japanese commander, immediately dispatched motorized regiments to confront the Chinese "who will be dispersed later by aerial bombardment if they fail to withdraw peacefully."

The Chinese Central News Agency said the Japanese started bombing operations at dawn and

Senate Debate Asks Changes In Housing Bill

First Day Vote Delayed on Rent, Cost Cuts, Rural Exemptions.

The Administratoin's $700,000,000 housing bill, providing an initial slum clearance appropriation of $26,000,000, yesterday was launched on a tide of choppy Senate debate, and immediately encountered calls for lower rentals, lower costs and rural area exemptions.

Second on the President's list of preadjournment "desirables," the measure moved sluggishly at the start, without any first-day votes. Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley ordered an 11 a. m. session of the Senate today, and pressed for a decisive ballot before evening.

While Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, was outlining aids to low-income beneficiaries, Chairman Henry B. Steagall of the House Banking Committee was arranging for first public House hearings today.

Wagner, George Dispute.

An angry flare-up between Wagner and Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia; a plea by Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, for changes benefiting "the poorest paid washerwoman," and an appeal for reduction of house unit costs by Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, marked opening Senate debate.

Meantime, Wagner was considering acceptance of an amendment by Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont Republican, assuring a full preaudit by the General Accounting Office of loans, contributions and grants under the bill.

With the wages and hours bill passed by the Senate, Barkley followed yesterday with the housing bill in a rush down what leaders hope is the last lap of the session. Speaker Bankhead said Congress is in the "home stretch," and House Leader Rayburn reiterated his "three weeks" to adjournment.

Court Bill to Follow.

The court reform bill will follow housing in the Senate. Tax loophole plugging, No. 4 on the program, is still in the committee drafting stage. Controversial sugar legislation, the fifth and last measure, was still before the Rules Committee.

Senator Wagner opened the Senate's housing bill debate yesterday with the statement that "no proposed social legislation within my recollection has won such widespread support."

"The initiation of this program," said Wagner, "will have a marked direct effect upon the revival of the construction industry generally, and its ramifying effects will flow into every channel of trade and commerce. No wiser step can now be taken to round out the current recovery, to introduce a permanent stabilizing influence into this recovery, and to eradicate one of the most costly and dangerous social evils in our midst."

But the smooth tempo of opening debate was soon ruffled by the open clash with George. The Georgian wanted to strike from the bill a reference to aid for "rural areas." He said the rural provision couldn't be administered unless some public housing authority bought the land. He said it would mean buying farms, if farmers were rehoused.

Wagner denied farm purchase was contemplated. The New Yorker said it would not apply to individual farm homes, but conceded it would cover "slums" if located in rural areas. He said he believed George was out of sympathy with the housing proposal.

George hotly retorted that he was opposed to "any fraudulent proposal." Wagner asked if he was imputing "fraud" to the housing bill and George replied he meant no reflection on Wagner.

Apologies Offered.

"Very well, we'll apologize to each other," said Wagner after shouting earlier: "I'll compare my character with that of the Senator from Georgia."

Voices rose at another point, when Senator Walsh declared the bill may cause "an awful scandal" unless it is revised to benefit only the poor man. He called for safeguards to assure against aid to other than the lowest income classes.

During the day Walsh called at the White House and later told reporters the President voiced "sympathy" with three amendments he will offer. The Massachusetts Senator wants tenants to be drawn only from those whose income is less than three times the rent, wants "unsafe or insanitary" dwellings demolished in relation to the new houses built and suggests raising the interest rate on loans to limited dividend corporations from 2¾ to 4½ per cent.

Senator Byrd demanded guarantees against "duplication of the extravagance" of the Resettlement Administration.

Byrd reviewed resettlement costs after Wagner estimated housing bill outlays at $4,000 per family or $1,000 per room.

Byrd Seeks Cost Limit.

Later, Byrd offered an amendment which would write into law the Wagner estimates. The amendment provided that no contracts for loans, contributions, capital grants or any other agreement could be entered into for projects costing more than $4,000 per family or $1,000 a room.

Pointing out the bill contains "post audit" provisions freeing the new housing authority from any current check on its outlays, Senator Austin offered an amendment to assure the General Accounting Office of its present powers of review over loans, grants and contributions.

The bill carries an initial $26,000,000 outright appropriation, to provide housing contributions, purchase $1,000,000 capital stock and to cover administrative expenses for three years. An additional $700,000,000 would be raised by sale of United States Housing Authority bonds, guaranteed as to principal and interest. From this sum, so-called self-liquidating loans would be made over a three-year period to public agencies in States and localities for slum clearance and construction of an estimated 175,000 low-cost housing units.

Chute Mark Claimed.

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—Gwynne Johns, 27-year-old former clerk, today claimed a new world record for a delayed parachute jump. He leaped from a plane at 22,400 feet over Salisbury Plain yesterday and said he fell 18,000 feet before pulling the ripcord.

Politics and People

Wagner Bill, to Add a Sixth Housing Agency, Held Little Improvement on Others.

By Franklyn Waltman

Perhaps the best of many examples of the gaping chasm which exists between New Deal objectives and the programs to achieve them is in the field of public housing. Indeed, the housing program (if it can be called a program) might be termed the horrible example of New Deal blundering and muddling. And the Wagner housing bill now before the Senate is not much of an improvement on previous undertakings.

For four years we have heard President Roosevelt and his spokesmen preach the necessity for a well-developed program of low-cost housing under Federal Government auspices—not only as a measure of improving social well-being, but also as a vehicle to promote economic recovery. Aside from a few expensive and uneconomic developments such as nearby Greenbelt (Tugwelltown) and a few more meritorious PWA projects, nothing toward that end has been accomplished—and the construction industry remains the most depressed spot in our economic structure.

WALTMAN.

Meanwhile, we have five Federal agencies, each independent of the other, dealing with Federal aid for the benefit of housing and home-owners. Let it quickly be said that several of these agencies have done most efficient and noteworthy work in saving homes for those who owned or were buying them and in reducing the cost of home financing. In addition, there have been several, and now are two, committees charged with working on the housing problem. Finally, at the fag end of an excruciating Congressional session, it is now proposed in the Wagner bill to set up still another housing agency, independent of those already in existence.

Obviously such a state of affairs represents bad administration. But what is worse, the Federal Government—after four years, mind you—is without any clearly defined housing policy. All are agreed on the objective. The meritorious nature of the social and economic ends sought are beyond dispute.

But there is no agreement on the policy which should be pursued to reach those ends. Indeed, it appears that there is a lack of understanding within the Administration and on Capitol Hill of the consequences of some proposals, as, for instance, that the pending Wagner bill commits succeeding Congresses for the next 60 years to appropriations which may total in excess of $1,200,000,000.

So great is the discretionary authority given in this bill to the proposed United States Housing Authority and so vague are some of the provisions of the bill, that it is impossible for anyone to make even a reasonably certain computation of the ultimate cost to the Treasury of this program. That cost in the end may total $500,000,000; it may total $1,200,000,000, or the total may come closer to $2,000,000,000 than the latter figure.

Nor does it appear to be generally recognized that the Wagner bill in several places contains provisions which are contrary to the expressed intentions of the Administration as, for instance, the section authorizing loans to limited-profit housing agencies. Instead of encouraging private housing enterprise, which is the President's expressed desire, that section undoubtedly would slow up such undertakings by creating another uncertainty.

Those points, however, will be more fully developed in this place tomorrow. The purpose of this column today is to demonstrate the confusion and lack of a thought-out policy which exists over methods of undertaking a housing program.

Illustrative of this confusion—and as far as the revised Wagner bill goes, also illustrative of Machiavellian draftsmanship—is the question whether the Federal Government should be committed to make annual housing subsidies for a period of 60 years. The original Wagner bill plainly authorized the housing authority to enter into contracts to make such payments for a period not exceeding 60 years.

First, the Treasury objected to that provision last March. Then on June 8, President Roosevelt at a press conference raised the same objection. On that occasion I wrote in The Washington Post that "President Roosevelt at his press conference turned thumbs down on any housing program that would obligate the Federal Government for 50 or 60 years to provide subsidies to make possible reduced rentals for the benefit of low-income groups." Mr. Roosevelt on that occasion recognized the necessity for subsidizing low-cost housing and slum clearance, but he spoke favorably of the lump sum subsidy method—that is, a Federal grant of 40 per cent of the cost of the project paid at the time of construction.

Since then the Wagner bill has been rewritten, apparently to meet the Presidential objections. But as regards this particular point, the President's objection was not met, except superficially and on paper. Even though the report of the Senate Education and Labor Committee makes no reference to the fact that contracts providing for such annual contributions for 60 years could be made, this is possible under the revised bill.

The committee report explains that "the bill provides (sec. 10(c)) that the maximum fixed commitment to pay annual contributions without revision shall not exceed 20 years. At the end of that period, the authority will be entitled to stop or reduce all annual contributions where changes in price levels, or other conditions do not justify their continuance."

Actually Section 10 (c) of the bill reads as follows:

"In case any contract for annual contributions is made for a period exceeding 20 years, the authority shall reserve the right to re-examine the status of the low-rent housing project involved at the end of 20 years and every 10 years thereafter; and, at the time of such re-examination, the authority may make such modification (subject to all provisions of this section) in the fixed and uniform amounts of subsequent annual contributions payable under such contract as is warranted by changed conditions and as is consistent with maintaining the low-rent character of the housing project involved. In no case shall any contract for annual contributions be made for a period exceeding 60 years."

One further sentence from that section of the bill is important to a clear understanding of what it provides. This sentence reads: "The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of all annual contributions contracted for pursuant to this section, and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated in each fiscal year, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amounts necessary to provide for such payments."

Thus, the bill clearly empowers the United States Housing Authority to enter into contracts to make annual contributions to housing projects for periods up to 60 years—just as the original Wagner bill provided. In the revised bill, however, it is provided that such contracts must reserve the right of the housing authority to re-examine the status of the project involved at the end of 20 years and every 10 years thereafter in order to make modifications.

What kind of modifications? The bill carefully specifies that the modification shall be subject "to all the provisions of this section" and furthermore specifies only such modification as is "warranted by changed conditions and as is consistent with maintaining the low-rent character of the housing project involved." The changed conditions warranting a modification, as pointed out in the report, would be changes in price or rent levels, not a decision on the part of a future Congress to abandon such payments.

Thus actually Congress in this bill would authorize the housing authority to bind future Congresses for 60 years to appropriate for such annual contributions, subject to such revision of the terms as conditions might warrant after 20 years. The purpose and intent of the bill clearly points to continuance of such payments for whatever period is under contract. Future Congresses could set aside such agreements only by repudiating the faith and credit of the United States Government.

Subsidies based on annual contributions to low-rent housing projects for 60 years may be desirable and meritorius. But the President has expressed doubt over the propriety of his Administration binding Congress for 60 years. After that the scheme is cleverly camouflaged but not changed in substance. Does Mr. Roosevelt know that the bill still contains the section to which he objected? Or has he changed his mind since June 8? At least we should know what we are doing in so important a matter.

Franklyn Waltman will continue his discussion of the Wagner housing bill in this place tomorrow, pointing out, among other things, how it is possible under that measure for the Treasury to pay to borrowers $108 in subsidies for every $100 it lends to them.

Morgenthau Marks Coast Guard Birthday

By the Associated Press

Greetings from Secretary Morgenthau and Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, the commandant, went to all Coast Guard personnel yesterday in observance of the 147th birthday of the service today.

The Coast Guard, then called the revenue marine, as created by the First Congress in 1790 after the Continental Navy had been disbanded. For six years the tiny revenue fleet of ten vessels was the Nation's only armed force afloat.

Rogers' Widow Claims Tax Cut Due to Termites

Los Angeles, Aug. 2 (AP).—Termites took the spotlight today in a $9,710 tax recovery suit filed by Mrs. Betty Rogers, widow of Will Rogers, cowboy humorist.

Mrs. Rogers stated she was "overcharged" on her 1929 Federal income tax, because she was not credited with damage done to her Beverly Hills home by termites. The property, costing $62,854, had to be razed, she said.

Senate Aroused By Ruling Over Justice Choice

President May Pick Man in Recess, Attorney General Holds.

pions of the Cummings stand insist it means "happen to exist."

Argued pro and con in the cloakrooms, the controversy broke into open debate when Senator Connally rose in a sarcastic attack on Vandenberg's move to put the Senate on record. The Texan charged Vandenberg with having Presidential ambitions and declared his resolution was designed to incite ill feeling and for publicity purposes.

"He ought to know it cannot Here Burke served flat notice he would vote against confirmation of any appointee, regardless of his qualifications, named to Van Devanter's vacancy during a Congressional recess.

Study in Recess Planned.

The Nebraskan called on Majority Leader Barkley to urge the President to "avoid this pitfall that yawns before him."

"There should be no attempt to hush up the matter and pass it over," said Burke. "I believe the people of this country will not look with favor on leaving this vacancy unfilled, especially since we have been told the court needs 'new blood.' Members of this body have an equal responsibility with the President."

Earlier, the Senate Judiciary Committee cleared the path for a recess study of the whole court question, including constitutional amendments looking to court reform, and all proposals for procedural and structural court changes.

Unanimously, the committee ordered a favorable report on a resolution jointly sponsored by Burke and Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico. But the resolution was first changed to provide for a special Senate committee of seven instead of five and an appropriation of $10,000 instead of $7,500.

Court Bill Next.

The Burke-Hatch plan will supplement the lower court reform bill drafted by the Judiciary Committee after the President's court plan was definitely sidetracked. The court reform bill will be called up as soon as the housing bill is disposed of. The Burke-Hatch resolution will be called up separately.

Majority Leader Barkley told the Senate he knew of no instance of the Senate rejecting a court appointment "merely because he took his seat during the recess"

Barkley said he recalled four recess appointments to the court. One, he said, was later rejected by the Senate for "other reasons.. Another, he said, was confirmed. In the other two instances, Justice Holmes and Harlan "declined to sit until they were confirmed."

Burke retorted that Harlan and Holmes set "a very fine precedent."

"Decisions Would Stand."

"They recognized," he said, "that the filling of vacancies on the Supreme Court is not the single act of the Executive or of the Senate, but the joint act of both, and they did not sit in any case until both had acted."

Replying to Connally, who had said the appointee would have to take his chances on confirmation Burke said "he is not the only one who would take a chance." He said a recess appointee on the bench might lead to "a weakness in the decisions of the court; at least, it would throw a cloud over them."

"There is nothing to that point," Connally snapped. "He would be a judge de facto, and his decisions would stand."

Senator Wheeler briefly took the floor to say the Constitution clearly indicated the President "should send in the name while Congress is in session."

Open Since June 2.

"The Senate is in session now," Wheeler said. "They have stated repeatedly they needed new blood on the court. Yet this vacancy has existed since June 2. I don't think any self-respecting lawyer would accept an appointment and then wait to be confirmed by the Senate."

Late in the day, Vandenberg rose to deny publicity charges by Connally and Barkley, and insisted he was prompted only by "the country's best interest" in offering his resolution.

A number of Senators commented only off the floor. Chairman Henry F. Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said Cummings' opinion was "good law," but "a wise man would not take his seat until confirmed by the Senate."

Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican, said he found no fault with the Attorney General's precedents, but "the precedents grew out of political exigencies and are in conflict with the plain, simple and unmistakable language of the Constitution."

Only 7 States Assess Employes Idle Taxes

By the United Press.

The Social Security Board reported yesterday only seven States require employes to contribute to the unemployment compensation funds from which they will be paid in future periods of idleness. All other States build their unemployment funds entirely from taxes on employers.

All States, Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia now have laws bringing them into co-operation with the Federal Government under unemployment compensation provisions of the Social Security act.

U. S. Won't Enter Arms Race, Johnson Declares

Rock Hill, S. C., Aug. 2 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson told the South Carolina department of the American Legion today that the United States would compete "with no foreign powers in the race for armament nor in the lust for conquest."

"We merely ask that we be allowed to work out our own destiny in our own way without outside interference," he said.

Meehan Loses Wall St. Seat For 'Rigging' Stock Market

SEC Acts First Time, Ousts Trader From 3 Exchanges.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—Michael J. Meehan, the Broadway ticket agent who became one of Wall Street's best known "bulls," was expelled today by the Securities and Exchange Commission from the New York stock and curb exchanges and the Chicago Board of Trade.

Meehan, head of the brokerage firm of M. J. Meehan & Co., was convicted by the commission of "rigging the market" in June, 1935, with the common stock of the Bellanca Aircraft Corporation.

The red-thatched, 47-year-old speculator—who dominated the sensational rise of R. C. A. stocks in the months before the October, 1929, collapse and who reputedly made millions in doing so—has been away from his office since last spring, suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Court Fight Possible.

Whether he would seek reinstatement of his exchange memberships, and carry his case into the Federal courts, was a matter of much conjecture in brokerage circles.

None of Meehan's partners were named in the manipulation charges and at the offices of the commission in New York it was said the expulsion order applied only to Meehan personally. Of the four other partners who hold memberships in the New York Stock Exchange, one is his son, William M. Meehan, whose seat on the exchange was a present from his father on his twenty-first birthday.

During nine days in June, 1935, the Bellanca stock rose from 4 to 5½ and the commission characterized this as "most unusual activity for a stock that for long periods prior thereto had been traded only in negligible amounts."

Matched Orders Charged.

Meehan, the commission said, employed various manipulative devices to force up the price, including the matching of buying and selling orders.

During this period, the commission said there was talk, "stimulated by the respondent, circling about as to newer and better days for Bellanca;" and the conclusion is

MICHAEL J. MEEHAN.

"irresistable" that Meehan's purpose "was to create a misleading appearance of active trading in the stock and a misleading appearance with respect to the market in the stock."

This was the commission's first decision in a manipulation case.

Messenger at 16.

Meehan, a brokerage house messenger at 16, manager of a theater ticket office on lower Broadway in his early 20s, was a jovial, free-spending young fellow who received plenty of "tips" from his broker-clients. That he made money on them was evident when, in 1916, he bought a membership on the New York Curb Exchange. Two years later he paid $90,000 for his stock exchange membership.

In 1924, when Radio was listed on the exchange, Meehan became the "bull" operator in this stock. Once, when a friend sold it at $58 a share, after making a 10-point profit, Meehan told him:

"You're crazy. Radio will go up at least 300 more points."

"You're the one who's crazy," said the friend.

But Meehan saw Radio go up to $570 a share just before the October panic.

'Personal' Adjournment of Nearly 100 Members Revealed by House Roll Calls.

PERSONAL ADJOURNMENT already has been taken by nearly a hundered members of the House, if roll calls are any criterion. There are 432 members on the rolls—there being three vacancies—but the largest number to answer on the last 15 roll calls was 349.

On one occasion the count fell away to 292.

Representative Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, said last week he was leaving for the rest of the session. His health has not been good. Representative Sirovich, of New York, is on a Russian tour.

Other members have gone, but House leaders confessed yesterday they did not know how many have departed for good, so far as this session is concerned.

Starting its eighth month next Thursday, Congress already has been in session 213 days. If it keeps at work 24 more days, the session will be the longest since the 292-day session of the Sixty-seventh Congress, which lasted from December 5, 1921, to September 22, 1922.

In 1935, the legislators met from January 3 to August 26—236 days.

The longest session since the First Congress in 1789 was a 354-day wartime meeting—from December 3, 1917, to November 21, 1918.

MEXICAN DIVORCE TRADE became a target again for Congress when the House adopted a bill which would bar attorneys in Mexico from use of the United States mails to solicit such business. The bill went to the Senate.

Mexican divorces have been especially popular in California, perhaps because of proximity. As a result, many Hollywood celebrities have figured in such divorces in recent years.

In the District, judges have followed the practice of warning those anticipating such divorces that either party could be held in contempt of court on complaint of the other.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE Cape Hatteras national seashore area was voted by the House unanimously. The bill, sponsored by Representative Warren, North Carolina, provides for setting up an area of 100 square miles along the narrow strip of seacoast from Kitty Hawk to Ocracoke Inlet. When as much as 10,000 acres has been acquired the National Park Service may take over administration.

The project has been studied for three years and was approved by Secretary of Interior Ickes and by the Budget Bureau. The Warren bill provides no appropriation but gives 10 years for acquisition of the land.

A nucleus exists in the possessions of the United States Biological Survey, which now owns 2,500 acres in the area, the Wright brothers memorial at Kitty Hawk, a national park covering 350 acres, and the State park at Cape Hatteras, covering 1,000 acres.

The area is rich in historic associations, and is noted for its beautiful sand dunes. It provides some of the finest fishing on the Atlantic Coast and is patronized as a summer resort. The gulf stream approaches the coast at that point and provides excellent ocean bathing.

"GOLD STAR" PARENTS and widows of World War veterans saw pensions draw a step nearer when the House Rules Committee recommended consideration this week of legislation to that end. Such a pension would supplant war-risk insurance payments, which expire in the next three years.

Chairman Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, of the World War Veterans' Committee, said the legislation would cost approximately $8,000,000 annually.

Payments to a financially dependent father or mother of a soldier who lost his life in the war would be increased from $15 to $25 each.

Widows' payments would be increased from a minimum of $30 to $35 a month to a maximum of $40 to $45. Rankin estimated that approximately 45,000 parents and widows would be affected.

Power Shifted By Reform Act, Byrd Contends

Congress Could Regain Authority Only by Two-Third Vote, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Byrd (Democrat) Virginia, charged yesterday the Administration's bill to reorganize the executive branch of the Government would give President Roosevelt a vast amount of power which Congress could be sure of recovering only by a two-thirds vote.

The Virginian, who long has argued that governmental reorganization should effect greater economies than the Administration proposed, opened fire on the measure at a Senate committee hearing.

Charles E. Merriam, a member of the President's Reorganization Committee, retorted from the witness stand:

"I don't know whether Senator Byrd seriously intended to intimate the (President's) committee did not intend to maintain the democratic form of our Government, but if he did, I resent it."

"Intentions in Bill."

Byrd replied:

"I said nothing about anybody's intentions. I only said what was in the bill and nobody can deny it's there. I don't know anything about your intentions, and I don't care anything about them."

Merriam was the first witness to testify on the reorganization bill introduced by the late Majority Leader Robinson of Arkansas. It would carry out many of the recommendations of the President's committee.

Byrd, chairman of a special Senate committee which began study of reorganization at the last session of Congress, contended that, if Congress wished to recover any of the power the Administration proposal would grant to the President, the Chief Executive could make a two-thirds vote necessary by using his veto power.

Hoover Set Precedent.

The Robinson bill would give the President power to regroup, consolidate, create and abolish Governmental agencies. It would extend the civil service system and give the President six administrative assistants. It also would create a new Cabinet post, the Department of Public Welfare.

Chairman Byrnes (Democrat) South Carolina, of the committee considering the bill and Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, cootended with Merriam that the Hoover Administration set a precedent for such legislation.

Minority Leader McNary (Republican), Oregon, replied that economy legislation under Hoover was limited in effect to 18 months. Byrd added that a resolution of either house of Congress could have nullified any of the President's acts under that legislation.

Merriam argued the recommendations of his committee would not "disturb the balance of power but would leave it where it is."

They would, he asserted, merely "give to the President the tools of modern management, end the spoils system and relieve department heads of much detail work."

350 Plasterers Strike to Force Wage Accord

Building Work Reported at Standstill; Parley Scheduled Tonight.

All open-shop plastering work ceased in Washington yesterday on large residential buildings as a new C. I. O. Union, Local No. 7, United Building Trades Federation, pulled 350 plasterers off the job in a demand for a signed contract offering $1.25 an hour and union recognition.

A meeting between some 35 or 40 contractors and union agents is scheduled for tonight, tentatively at the home of James DeMorrow, 513 Irving street northwest, a contractor, where the questions at issue probably will be settled.

According to J. R. Crown, business agent, plasterers likely will be back at work Thursday. He expects little trouble in getting his demands, as the contractors last June orally agreed to them, he said.

Clifford Hedricks, chairman of the employers' committee, however, said that the minds of the contractors may have changed since the June conference, and that yesterday's strike was unjustified because the union called it without reason.

Action Explained.

Crown stated the strike was called merely to force the contractors to put in writing what they had orally agreed to do, something the contractors have so far failed to do. "They have refused to meet us," he declared. "We struck in order to force them to get together and sign."

In June, the newly organized union, which claims 300 members out of 400 formerly ununionized plasterers here, asked for a pay raise from $1 an hour to $1.25 an hour. At a conference with contractors at the Hamilton Hotel, the contractors said they could not pay $1.25 an hour because they all had figured their jobs at $1 an hour. However, the contractors agreed to install a $1.25-an-hour rate October 1.

Hedrick and Crown both agreed on the above-stated facts. On what occurred thereafter, they disagreed.

Housing Job Affected.

Hedrick claims the union did not accept the proposal, returned to its headquarters, and shortly ordered a strike. Crown says his negotiating committee was not authorized to accept the terms proposed, but returned to headquarters, and the membership ratified the proposal as satisfactory, with no strike. Weeks after, when contractors had not signed, the strike was called, Crown said.

Both sides were in agreement yesterday that work had ceased completely on all plastering jobs of any size here, including the $3,500,000 Federal Housing project on Glebe road, a large apartment at Fourteenth and Otis streets, two apartments on Sixteenth street, an apartment at Thirty-ninth street and Massachusetts avenue, and numerous residences and smaller jobs. Both agreed 350 men had walked out.

The Washington Building Trades Council, an A. F. of L. affiliate, discounted the strike as unimportant, and said that only a small number of men were involved. John Locher, executive secretary of the council, stated he believed less than 100 men were affected and that the only work involved was on small one and two-story houses.

Youthful Mexicans Encouraged to Give Play to Impulses in Art; Water Colors Display Feature of Exhibition at National Museum

Wide Range of Subjects Covered by Neighbors to South.

Little Mexicans apparently are encouraged to give free rein to their artistic impulses.

That is the conclusion one reaches after a visit to the exhibit of Mexico City school children's art work which opened yesterday in the Natural History Building of the National Museum.

Of greatest interest to the crowd was a group of water colors done by children between 7 and 12. Bright colors, variety of subject matter and little or no concern with technique featured the paintings.

Everything from railroad trains to a tumbling act is enough to spur the sons and daughters of Mexico to intense creative endeavor. Occasionally the result leaves the visitor in some doubt as to just what the young artist actually saw, but inevitably it is lively and colorful.

Is Confusing Work.

Among the more confusing works is a still life which careful study reveals as a haphazard pile of melons in various states of decomposition.

More successful is an interior depicting a sick child's bedroom. Unpleasant looking bottles of medicine stand on a table beside the bed; a teddy bear is tucked between the covers; a little white vessel beneath the bed adds a further realistic touch. The artist solved a difficult problem in perspective with no apparent effort.

More ambitious in scope are two panoramic studies, one of a fire-fighting scene and the other of an amusement park, complete with ferris wheel and merry-go-round.

Work More Advanced.

The work of older pupils in Mexico City's public school of arts and the theater and dance school is more advanced technically, as would be expected from students concentrating on the arts. In this group are wood cuts, color plate of theatrical costumes and stage sets and a series of oil paintings.

Several of the oils have been exhibited in Paris and Berlin. The entire collection is on its way to Dallas, where it will be shown at the Greater Texas and Pan-American Exposition.

Angel Rosas, New York delegate of Mexico's ministry of education, who was present for the opening yesterday, considers "Mother At Rest," the only piece of sculpture in the collection, as the finest item. Modeled out of cedar, it is the squat figures of a seated Mexican woman holding a young child.

Luis Quintanilla, Mexican Charge d'Affaires here, also attended yesterday. The exhibit will be on view through Sunday.

Girl Held as Thief Says $20 Wages Wouldn't Buy Car

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Arrested on an embezzlement charge, Miss Judith Kaye, 26, told Detective Tracy Duffy today there were four reasons for her acknowledged peculations.

She complained her $20 a week wage as a bookkeeper was insufficient for the purchase of a car. The second reason was a demand from a brother, Howard, for $200 to purchase gifts for his fiancee.

"I gave my other brother, Irving, about $350," she told Duffy, and a trip to Texas, "which cost about $350," was her fourth reason.

Miss Kaye's employers said they discovered shortages of about $2,000 in her accounts.

Boy With Wife, 14, Gets Job and D.C. Has New Booster

John Cato, jr., 19, Georgia youth who came to Washington with his 14-year-old bride, in search of work and a home for his wife, yesterday found both.

M. L. Langford, vice president of the Sanitary Grocery Co., reading of John's plight in the Sunday Post, communicated with the paper and requested that John appear at his office.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Thomas C. Willis, 2023 Park Road northwest, had also read about John's search for work and had taken him on a tour of business establishments where she thought he might obtain employment. Returning to the offices of The Post, Mrs. Willis learned of Langford's request and immediately took John to Langford's office.

In less than ten minutes, John was being instructed how to operate a mimeograph machine and was given a $10 advance on his $18 weekly salary.

After telling Ruby—that's John's proud wife—of the good news, John secured a room in nearby Maryland. With a new outlook on life, he beamed:

"It sure is wonderful. I'm going to buy a new dress for Ruby and maybe some school books. Washington is a fine city—especially when you know that your wife won't have to sleep in the park or go hungry—yes sir, it sure is wonderful!

Harlan Strip-Tease Avoided at Inquiry

Harlan, Ky., Aug. 2 (AP).—The "strip-tease" charge stayed under cover as National Labor Relations Board examiners opened hearings today on charges that the Clover Fork Coal Co., of nearby Kitts, Ky., violated the Wagner act.

Issues raised at the first session were whether the company engages in interstate commerce and whether it intimidated workers. The charge that it employed "lewd and immoral women" to dance as a counter-attraction to United Mine Workers' meetings went unmentioned.

Attorneys said the hearings likely would last more than two weeks.

Jury Splits on Beer Intoxicating Power

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 2 (AP).—A jury of four men and two women disagreed today on whether a man can get drunk on 3.2 beer, a beverage held nonintoxicating by the Kansas Legislature.

William Leifheit was ordered retried August 12 on a charge of driving while intoxicated. His counsel asserted that all he had been drinking when his auto collided with a truck was the legally nonintoxicating beer.

J. A. Van Orsdel Is Gravely Ill In Bay State

Associate Justice of U. S. Appeals Court Ill of Heart Malady.

J. A. Van Orsdel, senior associate justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, is gravely ill at Great Barrington, Mass., it was learned here yesterday. Accompanied by Mrs. Van Orsdel and their niece, Mrs. Katherine Warren, he left for Great Barrington a month ago.

His condition was reported as "quite serious" by Ralph A. Van Orsdel, a nephew, executive of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., who visited him last week. He has been ill for two or three weeks from a chronic heart disease, although he was reported in good health before leaving the District. He is 76 years old.

The Van Orsdels, who make their Washington home at the Roosevelt Hotel, are staying at the Great Barrington summer home of Mrs. Margaret Zimmele, of Washington.

A member of the District Court of Appeals for 30 years, appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt in 1907, he is extremely popular among members of his profession. Both lawyers and court attaches were disturbed to learn of his illness.

A striking figure, with iron gray hair and distinguished mustache, the associate justice is known as a conservative, yet occasionally supports New Deal legislation attacked in the courts. His most famous decision in recent years was one affecting the relief act of 1935. The court, by a vote of 3-2, specifically denied the Resettlement Administration undertaking a housing project at Bound Brook, N. J., but lawyers took the decision to mean the entire relief act for that year was unconstitutional.

He married Miss Kate Barnum, of Blue Springs, Nebr., in 1891. There are no children.

Support of Kohen For Commander Legion Post Issue

A special meeting of Costello Post of the American Legion will be held in the District Building at 8 tonight to decide which candidate the post's delegates will support for department commander.

At an earlier meeting the post unanimously endorsed Charles Kohen, long active in legion affairs, for the position. Since then, however, the post's delegates to the department convention are said to have thrown their support to another candidate.

The meeting tonight is being held to decide whether the delegates must support the candidate already endorsed by the post.

Kohen, a member of the post for the past 19 years, is manager of Costello's league-leading junior baseball team and chairman of the department radio committee. For his outstanding work as department relief officer, a position in which he served without pay, he was made the first recipient of the Watson B. Miller award.

Mystery Golfer Called Man Reborn

Los Angeles, Aug. 2 (AP).—John Montague, whose golf showmanship entranced Hollywood, sat placidly before Gov. Frank F. Merriam today and heard attorneys trying to prevent his extradition on an old robbery charge term him "a man reborn."

Officers seeking Merriam's permission to take the recently exposed "mystery man of the fairways" to Essex County, N. Y., for trial on a charge of participation in a 1930 roadhouse robbery, were confronted with a plea that Montague has rehabilitated himself and that further punishment is not necessary.

The Governor said he would take the plea under advisement.

Genial Guy Kibbee, of the movies, and a stack of affidavits from Hollywood friends lauded Montague as above reproach while he hobnobbed with them.

Railway Unions Vote for Strike To Force Pact

Non-Operating Groups to Quit If Settlement Is Withheld.

Calling of a strike of some 800,000 non-operating railroad employes unless there is a satisfactory settlement of their long-pending wage demands, was authorized in a vote of 14 unions, whose ballots were counted here yesterday.

George M. Harrison, head of the Railway Labor Executives Association and spokesman for the unions, announced last night that 88 per cent of the workers had voted in favor of the strike.

At the same time, the ballots of 300,000 other railroad employes, in the five train-operating brotherhoods, on a separate strike vote, were being counted at Cleveland, Ohio, with the result expected to be known today. The five operating unions are those of the conductors, engineers, firemen, trainmen and switchmen.

The non-operating organizations, whose votes were counted here by the presidents of the unions, include such workers as machinists, boilermakers, sheet metal workers, electrical workers, carmen, firemen and oilers, signalmen and blacksmiths.

Wage Raises Asked.

The operating unions have asked a 20 per cent wage increase. After complaining over failure of the roads' representatives to get together with them, heads of the unions called a strike vote, which has been under way for three weeks.

Several days ago the carriers' committee announced they would meet with the operating unions' group at Chicago on August 5.

The 14 non-operating unions have demanded a 20-cent-an-hour pay increase. Long negotiations were held here, fruitlessly, and the union negotiators made a report to the chairmen of their unions, who also authorized a strike vote.

Meanwhile, Otto S. Beyer, member of the National Mediation Board, is holding almost daily conferences with the parties to the latter dispute, trying to reach a settlement. If these efforts are unsuccessful, the board will propose arbitration of the question, which either side may reject.

In case of rejection of arbitration, the Mediation Board, under the railway labor act, will report to President Roosevelt that a serious stoppage of interstate commerce is threatened. The law provides that the President may then appoint a special board to seek a solution and make a report within 30 days. For another 30 days after the special board reports, the law provides there shall be no strike or other change in the situation.

Claims Power Over Ford.

In another labor development here yesterday, Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, declared his union, an affiliate of the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, would demand a signed contract with Henry Ford before the end of the year. He had conferred here with Lewis during the day.

Martin said the union now has signed contracts with every supply firm selling parts to the Ford company, and that it has "completely organized" Ford plants in Los Angeles and Oakland, Calif.; Kansas City, St. Louis, Dallas, Chicago, Buffalo, Louisville, Somerville, Mass.; Edgewater, N. J., and Iron Mountain, Mich. He said the union could even close down Ford's huge River Rouge plant.

Pastor Who Said Jesus Was Jew Seized by Nazis

Dr. Otto Dibelius and Woman Secretary Are Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 2.—Dr. Otto Dibelius, one of the sharpest critics of Nazi church policy, was arrested today along with his woman secretary. He is to be tried on August 8 because of an old, open letter regarding the Jewish origin of Jesus.

Dr. Dibelius, an associate of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader in the Protestant confessional synod fight against state interference with the church, rebuked the Nazi minister for church affairs last March.

In a letter to Hans Kerrl, Dr. Dibelius said the church must affirm that Jesus was a Jew. He responded to Kerrl's speech condemning such teachings by evangelical pastors.

"Yes, Jesus of Nazareth is, according to human nautre, of the line of David and therefore, a Jew. The New Testament teaches that clearly and unmistakably," he wrote.

The retired superintendent of the Evangelical Church Union also backed church teachings against "(Alfred) Rosenberg's myth" (Rosenberg is leader of the neo-pagan movement) and warned "the fight will never end unless the state begins to undertsand where lie the limits of its functions and actions."

In 1933 Protestant Nazis demanded the removel of Dibelius. A few months later August Jaeger, Prussian church commissioner, indefinitely suspended him as superintendent general. He was detained by police several days in 1934 when Nazi Christians invaded a church in which he spoke and raised a tumult until police arrived.

With Niemoeller he defied Kerrl by ordaining five theological students as ministers. Last June he was questioned for three hours by police and later took the arrested Niemoeller's pulpit and publicly defended him.

Harvard Ex-President Hurt in Auto Accident

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—Eighty-year-old A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, was reported tonight in "good" condition at Phillips House of Massachusetts General Hospital, suffering a fractured nose, fractured wrist and cuts on the chin resulting from an automobile accident.

Police reported Dr. Lowell, driving alone from Boston to his summer home at Cotuit on Cape Cod, was in a head-on collision last night near Plymouth with a car driven by Mrs. Margaret Hayes, of Braintree. Mrs. Hayes was not injured.

U. S. Spurns Arms Race, Johnson Says in Speech

Rock Hill, S. C., Aug. 2 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of War Louis A. Johnson told the South Carolina department of the American Legion today that the United States would compete "with no foreign powers in the race for armament nor in the lust for conquest." Johnson described the army as an insurance against war.

Janitor Abandons His Mops, Brooms For Professorship

Pittsburgh, Aug. 2 (AP).—No more brooms and mops for Dr. Edward Lee Harris.

The scholarly colored man, who has been a janitor at the University of Pittsburgh six years, will take a professor's job at Wilberforce University, in Ohio, he said today.

Dr. Harris was dusting a classroom when he received word of the appointment as head of Wilberforce chemistry department.

For six years he has been struggling to complete requirements for the highest academic degree awarded, doctor of philosophy. At the same time he's carrying on a full-time job as janitor and supporting a wife and two children.

"I am very happy," Harris said, "over the chance to do the sort of work I have studied for all these years."

Boy, 3, Drowned When He Falls in Well as He Plays

His cries for help brought to his aid Folmore Lucas, also colored, 3018 Staton road southeast, who pulled the boy out. Lucas said the water.

Efforts to revive the boy were futile and he was pronounced dead by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Wife Finds Man Dead And Expires Beside Him

Philadelphia, Aug. 2 (AP).—A stroke killed William Huppe, 50, as he shaved in his bathroom today. His wife, Jennie, 50, found his body and fell dead beside him, victim of a heart attack.

Anti-Saloon League, Unshaken by Repeal, Turns to Educational Policy in Dry Crusade

Nation to Be Taught Evils of Drink, Dunford Declares Here.

The policy of the Antisaloon League today is one of education against the evils of the liquor traffic, Edward B. Dunford, national attorney for the organization which once held the country within its grip, announced yesterday.

A gray, quiet, sincere disciple of abstinence, not unlike a monk in a cloistered chamber, Dunford sits behind his desk in the Washington offices of the once-powerful organization and looks from his open window to the dome of the Capitol beyond.

In the still summer air the click of glasses in a dozen nearby cafes can be heard, rising above the deep-voiced laughter. The novelty of repeal has worn off, but the diners and drinkers and merrymakers are forever audible of an August noon.

"The eighteenth amendment failed of enforcement," observed Dunford yesterday, "and now the sentiment of the people must determine the Nation's liquor policies.

Education Is Policy.

"Our policy today is one of education. We want to teach people the psychological harm of liquor, in any form, and the psysiological harm of liquor in any form."

The League, Dunford explained, is launching an educational drive. Bulletins and charts, issued in the States, will present the detrimental effects of drinking. These, he stated, are manifold.

Fundamentally, Dunford observed, there are more women drinking today than ever before. This may be due to changing times, he admitted, but there must be some way to cope with the problem.

Crime is increased by liquor traffic, he asserted, as is the question of dependency. Indulgence in alcohol creates vocational insufficiency, and this, in turn, is a menace to the social security law and its success.

Data are being collected everywhere by the league, data which, Dunford believes, will swing the pendulum of public opinion away from the liquor traffic.

Campaigns Launched.

When prohibition returns to the Nation once more, he feels, it will be because the people are "enlightened enough to want it."

There will be no rebellion. It will be a popular thing, based upon the knowledge and opinions of men and women, who desire to live in a better world.

"We are launching more aggressive campaigns in the States and cities and communities," he pointed out.

"We are approaching the subject scientifically, with the best medical knowledge and economic knowledge we can command."

Forms of liquor advertising are particular targets for the darts of the Antisaloon League. The benefit of a Federal assumption of responsibility and a State responsibility for the liquor traffic is realized.

At present the Antisaloon League, of which the public hears so little these dripping days, has organizations in 43 States, and the Washington office is a clearing house for its ideas.

Five States Leagueless.

States in which there is no Antisaloon organization just now are Utah, Nevada, South Dakota, North Carolina and Idaho.

In these Commonwealths, Dunford asserted, for various reasons the Antisaloon League is not needed. There are two organizations in North Carolina which are planning to merge, and probably affiliate definitely with the Antisaloon League.

Dunford is a native of Richmond and a graduate of the University of Virginia. He was a lieutenant of the late Wayne B. Wheeler.

The click of the glasses and the summer laughter in the beer parlors which surround the Capitol do not bother him.

He is an idealist, dedicated to the purpose of abolition of the liquor traffic through education.

C.L.Bardo Dies; Key Witness in Shearer Quiz

Also Was Prominent in Congress Study Into Munitions Profit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—Clinton L. Bardo, 70, one-time head of the National Manufacturers Association, and in 1935 a key witness in the Senate investigation of William B. Shearer, international naval lobbyist, died today.

Bardo, former president of the New York Shipbuilding Co., of Camden, N. J., also was a prominent figure in a congressional inquiry into profits in the building of naval craft.

A former Pennsylvania Railroad telegrapher, the industrial leader was the trustee of the New York, Westchester & Boston Roalroad, a position he had held for two years.

Head of the National Manufacturers Association in 1934 and 1935, the white-haired industrialist was a spokesman for the association during the period of the national recovery act, and before the Congress of American Industry in December, 1934, demanding that the Administration "more clearly set forth its attitude upon the future relationship between Government and industry."

He once termed the NRA an "artificial barrier" to recovery, and in a radio debate agreed with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson that business could absorb 8,000,000 workers under a satisfactory program.

He was born in Montgomery, Pa. Bardo worked for the Pennsylvania, Philadelphia & Reading, Lehigh Valley and the N. Y. C. & H. R. railroads, and was president of the Central N. E. Railway from 1920 to 1925. He was general manager of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad from 1913 to 1924.

The assumed the presidency of the New York Shipbuilding Co. in 1928, the same year the Government ended a vain attempt to tax the firm for $10,000,000 of wartime profits. He appeared frequently in Washington during investigations into the conduct of Government relations which shipbuilders, once refusing to waive immunity before appearing before a Senate committee investigating the entire munitions picture.

He became seriously ill July 21, and was removed to the hospital where he died. Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Hannah Bardo, and four children.

Boat Fire Blamed On Blaze in Sugar

of the burned bay steamer, testified that, contrary to previous testimony, both the fire hose pumps and the sprinkler system were operating.

Simmons told the board he smelled wood smoke when he came on deck for dinner. At the engine room door, he said, a fireman ran toward him and told him the vessel was ablaze.

"I called down to the engine room to start the fire pumps," he said. "I was told that the pump was already running. I opened several walves of the sprinkler system and the water came out."

He quoted Barnes, who proceded him on the witness stand, as saying: "Chief, that water is going to ruin all that sugar."

The watchman's testimony opened the second day of the investigation into Thursday night's holocaust at the entrance of Baltimore harbor. One passenger and two crew members died and approximately 90 other persons were saved. The ship, Norfolk-bound from Baltimore, burned to the water's edge.

The inquiry board asked the Chesapeake Steamship Co., owners of the City of Baltimore, to prepare charts of the vessel showing the location and operation of the fire-fighting system.

Debs in Boston Do Drink—Milk

letically inclined and naturally in training.

So the youths pass up champagne and other strong liquids in favor of milk. And hospitable Boston mothers know that and provide accordingly.

Society folk here recalled the coming out party given by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cameron Burrage in 1930 for their daughter, Katherine, now Mrs. Forrester Clark. Burrage got a bill of about $125,000 for that one. The food bill alone was $5,000.

Only last winter, other society leaders recalled, was the notable party given by the Lyneham Crockers for their daughter, Eunice.

The party opened with a brilliant ball at the country club. Then, over the week-end, daughter Eunice and her friends were loaded on a special train and hauled up to Peckett's-on-Sugar Hill in New Hampshire, for winter sports and dancing.

Mrs. George Van Antwerp, of Salem, summed up the situation briefly:

"In Boston," she said, "we still believe in dignity and conservatism. But we have very successful and gay parties."

gradually kills the tree upon which it parasitically depends for support.

Williams related how insects operating on the double shift forced members of his party to bed under fine-meshed netting at 7 o'clock.

At times the explorers relieved their thirst with water tapped from huge vines and dined on beans, stewed armadillos, wild pheasant, iguana, and javalins—pigs possessing skunk-like characteristics.

Most of the collecting was done on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec in the southern and eastern parts of the states of Vera Cruz and Oaxaca. The party brought out 2,000 specimens of herbs, shrubs and trees and 600 wood samples. Some were hitherto unknown to science.

Conference of All Agencies Interested in Fidelity Sought

Mrs. Bullis Continues Move to Reopen Closed Institution.

Hopes for a round-table conference between all parties concerned in the defunct Fidelity Savings & Loan Association "look favorable," Mrs. Mark Bullis, chairman of a special depositors' committee, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Bullis conferred with William Prentiss, jr., of the Treasury; with officers of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and with the board of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association, she said yesterday.

Her purpose was to reconcile various agencies to the proposal of reorganizing Fidelity. The proposal blew up last week with the withdrawal of the First Federal from further negotiations. At that time it appeared hopeless that Fidelity ever would reopen.

"Mr. Prentiss wants FHLB to take over Fidelity and reopen it as the First Federal," Mrs. Bullis reported after a talk with the Treasury official. "He told me nothing would make him happier."

Mrs. Bullis said that she had served on a depositors' committee of the closed United States Bank and also had been employed for a number of years in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and that she "knew how these things had to be worked out."

She said she had pleaded with officers of the FHLB to drop whatever differences they had with the Treasury, and that she had been invited to return to that agency for another conference. She may succeed in laying the whole tangled affair directly before the FHLB for reconsideration.

MRS. MARK BULLIS.

Gibbs Lyons, of the Comptroller's office, said yesterday:

"We're perfectly willing to see anyone at any time and discuss with them Fidelity's affairs."

Mrs. Bulliss disclosed that the local businessmen who made up the board of the proposed First Federal have not completely washed their hands of the bank's affairs. She stated they were willing to listen to further plans for reopening, and would be present at the round-table discussion whenever it can be arranged.

Soviet Protest Made to Tokyo After Attack

Japanese Held Responsible for Raid on Tientsin Consulate.

their planes advanced into Shantung Province, machine-gunning the Chinese barracks at Tehchow and then continuing south to drop bombs on Chinese concentrations at Pingyuan.

This operation was believed designed to warn Gen. Han Fu-chu, the semi-independent military governor of Shantung, that he must not send reinforcements from his own personal army to aid the Central government divisions around Tsangchow.

Chinese Extend Operations.

The Central Agency also said that Chinese military operations had extended far to the northwest of Peiping, where Nanking government divisions had entered Kalgan, principal city of Chahar Province. The Nanking divisions came from Shansi Province, it was said, and hence presumably were part of the army of Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, pacification commissioner for Shansi and Suiyuan provinces. Japanese had no confirmation of the report.

Meantime the Japanese were reported to be translating archives of the Soviet consulate general, which was raided yesterday. Chinese said that the Japanese believe the consulate was a chief center for communist and anti-Japanese activity in North China, and that if documentary proof of this fact can be found the consulate will be closed and its personnel forced to leave.

The raid was carried out by 20 white Russians during the absence of Consul General Michael J. Smirnow and his staff. The consulate is in Chinese territory and Smirnow and his assistants had fled to refuge in the British concession when the Japanese first attacked the Chinese city.

Air Attack Prevented.

Smirnow said he had been informed that the raid was to be carried out and had appealed twice to the international consular body for assistance. The British, American and other consuls general replied that they were unable to act since they had no authority in Chinese territory.

The Japanese repeatedly have announced that all Communist influence in North China must be eliminated immediately and it was believed the raid in the consulate general was preliminary to ousting all Soviet Russians from the areas of North China which have fallen under control of the Nipponese armies.

Japanese reinforcements reached Tientsin during the night and aided in mopping up the Hsiaoliuchuan district at the southern end of the former German concession where a band of Chinese snipers had threatened to cause international complications involving the United States.

Many American families live in this district protected by the Fifteenth Regiment, United States Infantry, which has been stationed in Tientsin since the Boxer revolt.

Japanese notified the consular body early yesterday that they intend to occupy the district and would give one hour's notice to residents in advance of an aerial bombardment.

When the consular body protested, the Japanese abandoned their bombing plans and cleared the area without firing. They said the Chinese snipers surrendered without resisting.

Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe promised the consuls that foreign lives and property would be spared, but he too was nervous and none could foretell when new bands of Chinese snipers and bomb brigades might attack isolated Japanese patrols and start general hostilities.

Heavy Fighting Expected'

As the situation stood early today, however, North China was generally calm and the Japanese army was in almost undisputed control of Hopei and Chahar provinces.

Both Chinese and Japanese admitted, however, that fighting on a major scale between the powerful German-trained armies of the central government and the Japanese was "almost inevitable" during this week.

First regiments of the 30,000 Japanese concentrated yesterday around Fengtai, southwest of Peiping, for a drive on the central government's divisions in the Paoting-fu area, were moving farther south and forcing the Chinese to withdraw. Japanese said the advanced central government detachments which reached Liuliho yesterday had retreated southward before Japanese armored cars which entered Liuliho during the night and destroyed the temporary trenches Chinese had dug.

Americans Warned.

Nanking, China, Aug. 2 (AP).—The United States consul at Tsinanfu, capital of Shantung Province, today advised that all American women and children in the interior of the province be concentrated at Tsinanfu or Tsingtao, on the seacoast.

The precarious situation in Shantung was given as the reason. The province lies immediately south of Hopeh and probably would be involved in any extension of the undeclared war between Japanese and Chinese. There are numerous mission stations and schools throughout Shantung, which has long been one of the principal theaters of American missionary work.

Tokyo Marshals Finances.

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP).—Japan adopted drastic measures today to marshal her economic resources and to finance prolonged hostilities in China if necessary.

The government acted to enrich its war treasury by a half billion or more yen (about $150,000,000) through new levies and anti-profiteering legislation.

A new law lifted the ban on American and other foreign ships engaging in trade between Japanese ports. Authoritative sources said one purpose of this was to release all possible Japanese tonnage from coastal traffic for war shipments to China and for the importation of vital commodities.

Efforts were hastened to win legislative approval of 406,000,000 yen (about $121,800,000) in appropriations for military operations in North China.

In addition to these appropriations, the government determined on one-year tax increases on national bonds, stock dividends and corporation profits to yield several hundred million more yen.

Flood-Control Pact Opposed By Roosevelt

Wants U. S. to Control Power Rights Resulting in New England.

tion despite the fact that Gov. Wilbur L. Cross, of his own State, as well as the three other Governors, had telegraphed appeals to Congress and President Roosevelt for approval of the compact.

Controversy Revealed.

Thus was revealed a sharp controversy over the long-sought and often despaired of agreement among the States of Vermont, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Massachusetts for control of the annual wild sprees of the Connecticut River.

Congress wrote into the 1936 flood control bill, provision that affected States must provide the sites and rights-of-way needed for Federal flood control projects. The four New England States were expected to provide the first demonstration of commonwealths getting together to share the cost of a project whose benefits would be spread over several States.

For many months little or no progress was made. President Roosevelt, a short time ago, called attention at a press conference to the fact that no agreement had been made. The difficulty of allotting the expense of providing dam sites and determining justly the share of the benefits each State would receive was a serious obstacle. A State near the source of a river, or in which a control reservoir was to be constructed, would have much less interest in the project than a State farther down in the watershed, where the river was larger and floods more severe.

The Federal Government was to provide $10,000,000 for the Connecticut River projects, with the State providing about $3,000,000 for dam sites and rights-of-way.

States Complete Compact.

The difficulties encountered under the 1936 bill caused virtual abandonment this year of the proposition that States must provide land for flood control projects.

However, the four New England States recently completed their compact and a bill is pending in Congress to ratify it in order that the work might be begun. The compact provides that States may obtain the power rights by putting in dynamos and other equipment for the generation of power at the Federally built dams. It is this provision of which President Roosevelt disapproves, Kopplemann said.

"My own thought is," the representative added, "that the States, particularly Connecticut, have lost, so far as the people are concerned, all possible power sites thus far utilized, and I consider it would be most unfortunate for the entire area of New England to lose whatever sites remain."

Asked whether he thought the four States would agree to the clause sought by the President, he replied:

"It all depends on how strong the utility interests really are."

One Miner Killed, Another Entombed By Tons of Debris

Mahanoy City, Pa., Aug. 2 (AP).—The bottom of an abandoned coal hole caved in today, hurtling three miners into an old shaft and burying them under tons of rock and earth. One was crushed to death, another was rescued, and a third was still entombed tonight.

Angelo Lorendi, 48, was dead when rescuers reached him. With picks and shovels fellow miners dug their way to Benedict Riccoplo, 36, and brought him out alive. He was removed to a hospital. Physicians said he probably would recover.

The man still entombed was identified as John Meconancio, 56. Rescuers said he signalled by tapping on a piece of pipe. His signals were growing faint, they said, but they hoped to reach him in several hours.

Canberra, Australia, Aug. 2 (AP). A census of survivors showed today that 427 persons were killed in a series of volcanic eruptions at Rabaul, on the Australian-mandated Island of New Britain, May 30 to June 7. Fifty bodies have been recovered thus far.

'Forgotten Man' of Congress Emerges as Tammany Chief

Silent Christopher Sullivan Named to Succeed Dooling in Coup; New Leader Immediately Consolidates Forces Behind Copeland.

One of the mystery men of the House of Representatives emerged yesterday from 33 years of self-sought obscurity with the announcement from New York City that Representative Christopher D. Sullivan is the new head of Tammany Hall.

Sullivan moved at once to consolidate the Tammany position behind the mayoralty candidacy of Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, according to an Associated Press dispatch last night, when he presided at his first meeting and supervised the selection of the rest of the Copeland ticket.

The florid-faced, heavy-built Irishman, a native New Yorker, and 67 years old, has avoided publicity so successfully since he was first sworn in as a representative on March 4, 1917, that only a few close friends could contribute data about his career.

Veteran members of the House, questioned yesterday, confessed they never had seen Sullivan despite years in the same Congresses.

Remains in Packground.

Search of the keenest memories of the few who know him failed to reveal he ever had made a speech on any subject on the floor of the House. Many swore he had yet to make a maiden address. Search of hearings before the important House Ways and Means Committee, of which he is third ranking member by virtue of seniority, showed that in many years he had asked but few questions.

One member told this story to illustrate Sullivan's knack of remaining in the background. He said a man approached Sullivan's secretary in his office, talked with her a few minutes and left. The secretary asked a Congressman present, "Who was that man?" The Congressman answered, "That was your boss, Christy Sullivan." His friends denied this story yesterday, but laughed nevertheless.

Helped District.

Sullivan performed one great service to the District of Columbia, his intimates revealed last night. By seniority he was ranking member of the House District Committee, and throughout the career of Thomas L. Blanton, Texas Democrat, who fought all legislation beneficial to the District, Sullivan remained on the committee, although refusing to serve as chairman, merely in order to block Blanton's chairmanship aspirations.

The stocky, retiring Irishman, pledged to Tammany even before his birth, as his father was before him, represents an old Manhattan district, the Thirteenth, a constituency which is almost exactly half-Irish andm half Jewish.

He has been in the real estate business for years; was elected to the New York State Senate in 1904, and re-elected thereto until 1916, when he ran for Congress. He was elected handily and has come back ever since, invariably voting "regular" and known as one of the most dependable Democrats in Congress. He has been the head of the Tammany delegation in Congress for many years.

May Quit Congress.

Last night he said he had not decided whether to resign from Congress and indicated that for a while he will remain in New York, flying to Washington whenever his vote is needed by the Democratic leaders.

Senator Copeland issued a laudatory statement yesterday, describing Sullivan as a "sweet and lovable character whom I have known for 20 years." He said the mayoralty campaign now "off to a running start," and that "all the actions of Tammany now make for harmony—particularly the unanimous selection of Sullivan. There hasn't been another unanimous choice for years."

The New York political situation still remained scrambled, with the four powerful outside-of-Manhattan boroughs lined up for Grover Whalen, World's Fair chieftain and former official city greeter, and the Republican-Fusionists behind Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia. Copeland, running on an anti-New Deal platform, is planning to enter Republican primaries, while LaGuardia may enter Democratic primaries.

Coup Effective.

Sullivan was chosen yesterday through a coup by County Clerk Albert Marinelli, district leader, who obtained votes needed to force an executive committee session despite opposition of acting Tammany leader, William P. Kenneally, longtime foe of Sullivan.

Kenneally wanted to postpone selection of a leader to replace the late James J. Dooling until after the primaries. Kenneally was knocked over a chair on August 19, 1936, by Sullivan, then 65, when the bad feeling between the two flared in a fist fight. Later the two shook hands and were said to be firm friends until maneuverings of the past week came to light last night.

Numerous Representatives, curious as to identity of this background power in New York politics, flocked to the office of the sergeant-at-arms of the House yesterday to gaze at Sullivan's picture. Few recognized him.

liability insurance of $11,000 for each cab is posted.

A traffic accident August 20, 1936, resulted in a suit for damages against the taxi company, it was learned, and judgment was returned several weeks ago.

The financial responsibility act, Traffic Director Van Duzer said, has greatly aided the District in its fight against irresponsible motorists. Under provisions of the law, a driver is refused highway privileges after his first accident until adequate liability insurance is posted.

All members of the Columbia Cab Association were named in the judgment. Deane said several drivers have already surrendered their permits and tags. The company's telephone, it was learned, has been disconnected and the 52 taxis have been taken from city streets.

Meanwhile, a slight improvement in Washington's highway accident problem was noted during July as compared to the previous month. Fatalities remained the same—seven for each month—but the number of accidents dropped from 1,154 in June to 1,070 during July. A total of 404 persons were injured last month as against 438 in June.

Thus far this year, 62 motorists and pedestrians have been killed in mishaps compared to 50 during the same period in 1936.

Cleveland Park Fights New Bid For Apartment

For the fourth time since 1931, the District Zoning Commission yesterday took under consideration the application of Raymond Garrity, local real estate man, to erect an apartment house in the 2700 block of Macomb street northwest.

And for the fourth time residents of that fashionable Cleveland Park neighborhood appeared before the commission to protest. On three previous occasions, the zoning body rejected Garrity's petition. Last October, the United States Court of Appeals upheld the commission decision.

But now, Garrity said, things have changed.

Mrs. W. W. Coblentz, 2737 Macomb street, however, had a different story. She said:

"Nothing has changed in the neighborhood. As a matter of fact, I'm still wearing the same hat I wore at the last hearing."

The value of surrounding property, it was argued, would be destroyed if Garrity is permitted to erect an apartment building facing Rock Creek Park. The land, Garrity contends, is not fit for the construction of private residences.

He urged the commission to rezone the section to permit erection of the apartment. The Commissioners said the application would be studied before a decision was given.

Loyalists Lose As Rebels Push Near Valencia

Franco Driving Forward; 1,000 Madrid Troops Reported Slain.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 2.—Insurgents pressed their offensive closer to the Valencia Province border in the northeast today and inflicted heavy losses on attacking government troops in the south.

Insurgent communiques from the Teruel front reported that Generalissimo Francisco Franco's forces had occupied the village of Bezas, broadening the front of their salient aimed at severing the main Madrid-Valencia highway.

They were said also to have taken the towns of Sierra Carbouera, Vertice, Mina and Tornaque as government troops fled before a push that has carried the insurgent forces 56 miles southward through the Universales and Carbonera mountains.

A dispatch from insurgent headquarters in Seville said a government offensive in the Alcujarra and Sierra de Nevada sectors of the southern front was repulsed with heavy losses. It said the government drive was a vain attempt to knife the Granada-Motril road and cut insurgent-held Granada's direct communications line to the sea.

Report 1,000 Men Lost.

Government aviation was reported particularly active bombarding insurgent airports. An aviation ministry dispatch said 12 insurgent planes were destroyed at Valencia de Don Juan in Leon Province. Other insurgent air bases were bombed at Salamanca and Burgos.

Insurgents asserted that government troops lost 1,000 men when an attack on the northwestern front failed to break insurgent lines east of Oviedo in Asturia Province.

"Two hundred bodies were left dangling in barbed wire entanglements when the attackers retired," the advices said.

Despite the stifling heat that had been expected to force a respite on the central front, west of Madrid, insurgent officers reported a new thrust against government lines north of Villanueva de la Canada.

They said government guns made little answer. Villanueva de la Canada is the southernmost point of the government's wedge behind the insurgents' Madrid siege lines.

20 Villages Captured.

Insurgent Headquarters, Albarracin Front, Spain, Aug. 2 (AP).—Far up in the picturesque mountains of Spain's ancient kingdom of Aragon, one of the strangest and most dramatic offensives of the entire civil war is heading no one knows exactly how far or where.

Designed as an attack to drive government militia from Teruel on the east of Madrid, the insurgent advance in two weeks has conquered 350 square miles of wild territory, captured 20 villages and routed an army of 12,000.

Today the insurgents were resting less than 30 miles from Cuenca, main junction of the last road open to government troops between Madrid and Valencia.

Furthermore, the Madrid defenders apparently are completely disorganized and the country between here and Cuenca provides a terrific defensive problem, being cut only by paths through a mountainous terrain.

The Madrid troops' difficulties are increased because of withdrawal of most of their artillery and loss of tremendous quantities of supplies, trucks and munitions—one complete battery was lost in recent fighting.

The Madrid fighters have been driven to the borders of the old Aragon kingdom, along a line at the junction of Teruel and Cuenca provinces and the tip of Guadalajara.

Apparently the decision now rests with the high command on continuance of a plunge into Cuenca, perhaps achieving in this way a severance of the final Madrid outlet that has been the objective of bloody months of battles.

peared fairly obvious that the police chief was not expected to grant such permits.

Picketing of the Internal Revenue Building was ordered by the painters union after a contract was awarded to an open-shop firm. At that time, a threat was made to picket Government painting projects throughout the country the contracts for which were handled by the Procurement Division of the Treasury.

The belief was strong on Capitol Hill yesterday that Attorney General Homer Cummings would hardly have asked Congress to enact the anti-picketing legislation without having consulted President Roosevelt. In fact, there were some who suspected that the idea may have been the President's own.

We Already Have Hotels.

The cult of size for its own sake has been a peculiarly American failing. So it is encouraging to note that in at least one important field of national endeavor the primary emphasis now is to be on quality.

The new American ocean liner, to be built under the direction of the United States Maritime Commission, will be, the commission says, "the finest and safest ship on the seas." But it will not be the biggest. On the contrary the vessel is to be only slightly larger than those very popular and successful ships, the Manhattan and the Washington.

This is further evidence of the level-headed policy being pursued by the recently organized maritime commission. It reveals a sensible approach to the problem of how a popular American merchant marine can be restored without creating more voracious white elephants of the Leviathan type. It is in line with the tradition which made the clippers of a century ago successful because they were both economical and efficient. And particularly pleasing, in view of revelations of inferior working conditions on American ships, is the emphasis which will be placed on "unexcelled accommodations" for crew as well as passengers.

There will continue to be demand for huge express liners like the Queen Mary and the Normandie, the latter of which has just cut the crossing to a few minutes under four days. But the ships which earn profits without prematurely aging their operators will be the somewhat slower, smaller and less pretentious liners with a friendly atmosphere which seasoned travelers value above lavish decorations.

The maritime commission is to be congratulated for realizing this and, incidentally, for showing an awareness of the budgetary situation unusual in Federal agencies. There will be plenty of time to provide a differential subsidy for a floating Grand Hotel when the Government gets out of the red.

Child-Labor Problems.

Before passing the Black bill the Senate deleted the sections giving the proposed Labor Standards Board power to deal with "oppressive" child-labor conditions.

It thereupon substituted the Wheeler-Johnson bill which prohibits shipments of products of child labor into States where their sale is outlawed and also requires such articles to be labeled when transported in interstate commerce. Finally the substitution undertakes to ban all interstate commerce in child-labor products after January 1, 1938. Senator Wheeler has explained that this three-way approach is intended to provide safeguards against possible adverse Supreme Court decisions. If one part of the program is invalidated, he hopes that another section will survive a test of constitutionality.

The substitute proposals, like the original Black bill, set the age limit at 16 years, or 18 years in hazardous occupations. The Wheeler-Johnson approach, however, makes no provision for dealing with special cases as did the deleted sections of the Black bill. The latter gave extensive discretionary powers to the Children's Bureau to permit children under 16 to work under certain conditions.

The important point is, however, that neither the original nor the substitute proposals belong in general wages-and-hours legislation. These, and all other plans for dealing with the problem of child labor, should be given separate consideration on their merits.

As a matter of fact, we have little really reliable information on the extent to which children are being exploited at the present time. But we do know that the opportunities for exploitation are numerous and probably most serious in intrastate occupations and industries. Under the Constitution, such localized evils can only be dealt with by State laws. If the States refuse to act, the remedy for their neglect should be sought in the passage of a constitutional amendment specifically empowering the Federal Government to intervene.

The proposed child-labor amendment, before the country since 1924, would probably have been ratified by this time if it had not been for its loose phrasing. There is reason to believe that a rewritten amendment reasonably restricted in scope and clearly limited to employment activities would meet with a better reception. If the necessary number of States should fail to ratify a revised resolution, their decision would seem to be final.

In any case, without a constitutional amendment, the Federal Government cannot deal comprehensively with the problems of child labor. The most constructive line of approach at the present time, therefore, lies in systematic efforts to induce backward States to raise their standards and provide better enforcement machinery.

Financing Japan's Aggression.

From Tokyo comes word that the Japanese are increasingly concerned about the financial cost of their military operations in North China. Undoubtedly a prolonged war would necessitate all sorts of stringent control measures and create a serious financial problem for a country with Japan's limited resources. It would be rash however, to assume that the cost of waging a war is today an effective deterrent to hostilities.

In recent years, indeed, a great deal of evidence has accumulated to prove the contrary. In the authoritarian state the cost of expenditures for rearmament, and non-productive public works has offered no insuperable obstacles. That has been shown in Russia, in Germany and notably in the case of Italy, which completed her conquest of Abyssinia, in defiance of dire predictions of financial collapse.

The reason for this unexpected resistance is obvious. It is due to a revolution in political institutions which has brought financial and economic activities under the control of the State in many countries. So long as the masses are willing to submit to the dictates of political overlords, labor and materials for all sorts of public undertakings, however destructive or useless, can be assembled. The mechanics of financing such acquisitions can be adapted to a particular place and time.

The people may be directly taxed, or indirectly taxed through inflationary increases in prices resulting from the methods employed by their government to raise funds. They may be forced to do without necessary articles or they may be permitted to buy rationed supplies at low prices. It is quite an art to conceal or shift the inevitable burdens of heavy governmental outlays so as to reduce popular discontent to a minimum. There is no way, however, of removing the burden from the shoulders of the masses. They pay even if they are temporarily ignorant of the fact.

These are generalizations that apply to the case of Japan as well as the autocratic states of Europe. Unless or until the sacrifices demanded of the Japanese create a dangerous political tension, the specter of financial collapse can be relegated to the background. The problem of financing a domestic budgetary deficit may be painful, the solution may lay up trouble for the future. But so long as the people remain docile, funds for the conduct of campaigns in China will doubtless be forthcoming.

Japan, however, is compelled to rely heavily upon imports to cover a lack of essential raw materials. During the first half of the present year, her armament program has so speeded up her foreign purchases that the adverse trade balance for the period is the largest since 1924, when buying was for reconstruction following the great earthquake. To finance purchases abroad, Japan cannot, of course, rely upon the various expedients that are open to her at home. Her foreign currency balances must be replenished and at present that is being done by releasing gold for export.

The government is acquiring all newly mined domestic gold and its recent revaluation of gold reserves has yielded a profit, releasing a large amount of gold for export. In the last few months, Japanese gold shipments to this country have been unusually heavy and the movement is still in full swing. Thus, the financing of the war with China becomes a matter of immediate concern to the American people, since our government is borrowing to "sterilize" incoming gold. In short, Japan's war in China is already adding to our Federal debt.

Local Minimum Wages.

Washingtonians are certain to watch with keen interest the organization of the first wage conference under the local statute revived by a recent Supreme Court decision. The Minimum Wage Board has done well to concentrate its efforts for the moment upon restoration of a minimum wage in local retail stores. For approximately 20,000 women are employed in local institutions of this sort. And a recent survey indicated that 45 per cent of them are earning less than the minimum wage of $16.50 per week established under the same act 20 years ago.

The immediate problem is to make these employes realize the importance of selecting competent representatives to the wage conference for retail stores. For these representatives will help to fix the minimum wages that will soon go into effect. The Wage Board does not itself establish minimum rates of pay for women. Rather, its job is to see that wage conferences function properly.

Both employers and employes have been asked to nominate candidates for the wage conference. From the nine representatives to be selected by each group the board will choose three employers and three employes. Together with three representatives of the public, to be chosen by the board, these groups will then become a wage conference for retail stores.

It will be the duty of the conference to fix the minimum wage for this line of work after it has obtained estimates as to the cost of living from the board. Under the law the minimum wage cannot be fixed at less than the cost of living in the District, on which new data are now available as a result of the current report on living costs prepared by the WPA. But the board has no authority to change the conclusions of a wage conference. It may only approve the agreement of the conference or send its report back for further study.

Success of this effort to put a floor beneath the wage level for women will depend in large measure, therefore, upon the interest manifested by employes whose welfare is directly involved. If they are awake to their opportunity, the mass meeting of feminine retail store employes, to be held in the Departmental Auditorium on Constitution avenue tomorrow evening, should be an impressive gathering.

The Court Vacancy.

The resolution introduced by Senator Vandenberg yesterday would make it "the sense of the Senate" that no appointment to the Supreme Court should be made except "at such a time as the Senate may act upon confirmation prior to the entry of the nominee upon his service."

As a general rule, which is all that the resolution seeks to confirm, this is already "the sense" of the Constitution and certainly of the country as a whole, regardless of whether or not the Senate goes on record in the matter. Common sense alone would indicate that where a confirmatory power is vested in a legislative body there should be no executive attempt to nullify that power. An interim appointment must always be unsatisfactory, just because it has no aspect of finality prior to the date of confirmation.

Interim appointments are, of course, often inevitable. And no valid objection arises when adjournment of the Senate makes them necessary. But in the case of a successor to the seat of Justice Van Devanter this is not the case. The vacancy has now existed for two months, during which period the Senate has been almost continuously in session.

The failure of President Roosevelt to appoint another Supreme Court justice has become more pronounced as Congress has slowly worked its way toward adjournment. And this failure has been the more surprising because of Mr. Roosevelt's earlier urgency with respect to the court-packing plan. It is indeed difficult to understand why there should have been such imperative need to secure six new justices of the President's choosing if there is no hurry at all about the present vacancy, with regard to which his power of nomination is unquestioned.

The Attorney General's opinion of the legal aspect of the matter is important. But much more important is the general public reaction toward any unnecessary delay in making this appointment. If the President was ready months ago to name six fully competent judges to the court it is scarcely logical to suppose that he cannot today nominate one man of caliber adequate for this vital post.

The desirability of a most careful selection is obvious. But under the circumstances suspicion that this is not the real difficulty is hard to down. After two months of inaction it begins to look as though the idea is not so much to make a deliberate selection as it is deliberately to delay the appointment in a way which savors of contempt for the Senate's constitutional authority.

Quadrupled Quints.

Perseverance wins the day. After four years of unremitting endeavor a Hagerstown biologist, aided and abetted by two white frogs he discovered in Frederick County, has become the proud possessor of 20 albino tadpoles. For their contribution to science the happy parents have been given a place of honor in the American Museum of Natural History in New York. And the patient obstetrician has already acquainted a palpitating world, via the mike, with all the delicate details.

Henceforth the little ones will be watched with the care, if not the publicity, given to the Dionne quints. Solemn scientists will observe their gills go in and their legs come out. And there is reason for the solicitude.

Albinos are fairly common among mammals and fishes but the batrachians have always shown predilection for a little color in their news. They are willing to change styles, but not even fear will ordinarily make them turn white. Instead, it alters them from yellow to a brownish black. What kind of a turn fright will give an albino tadpole is as yet as undetermined as the G. O. P. candidate in 1940.

Not science but their color, or lack of it, has set these tads apart. And if they grow up to be little white frogs and a hard fate forces them to live their white and blameless lives in a common frog pond, it is a cinch that their grimy brothers and sisters will look on them with strong distaste. Should they lift up their white little voices in song it is certain that their common kindred will join in one loud and vulgar chorus:

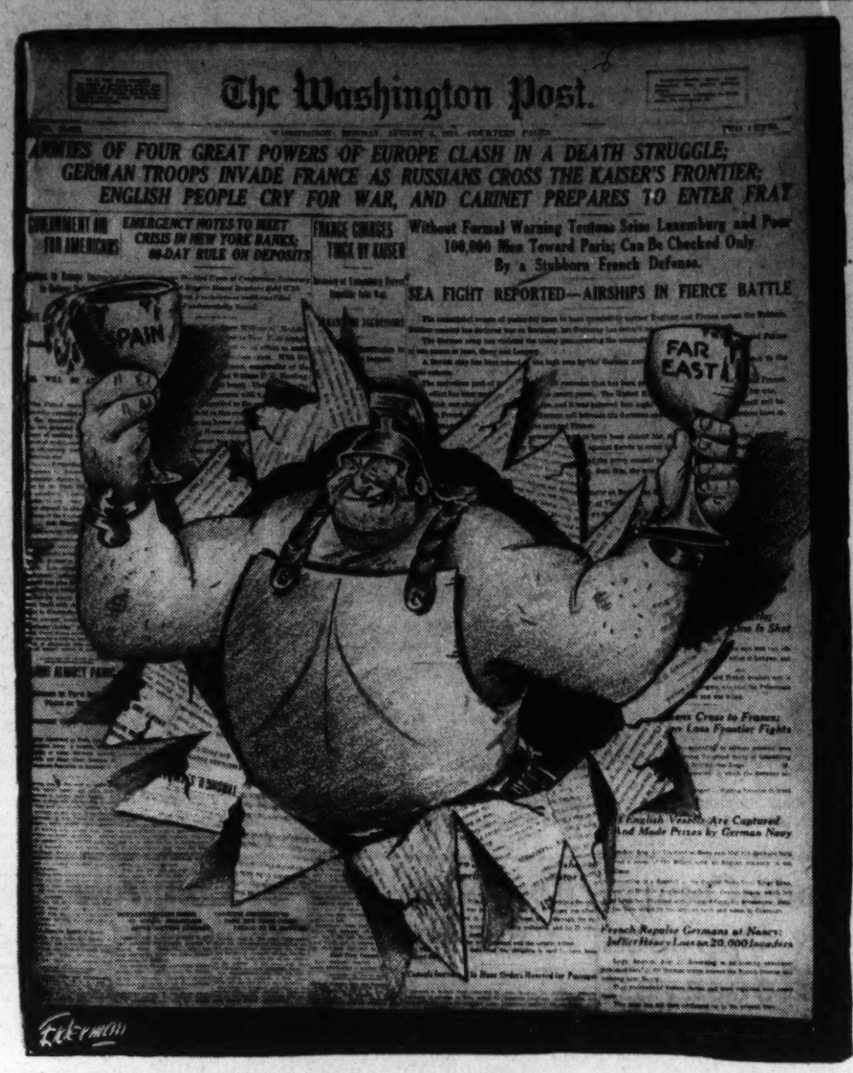

"Gee! I wish they'd croak!"

You can't have bread for nothing. If you don't exchange work for it, you exchange freedom.

"Which is the better friend to man, the horse or the dog?" asks a writer. The dog. So often the horse fails man in the home stretch.

"The Rockets' Red Glare."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When carnival company reaches a certain stage or state sentimentality is expected in "Sweet Adeline," but why change the tempo of "The Star-Spangled Banner" into hymn-like agony as it reaches the thrilling crescendo of "at the rockets' red glare?" And then sentimentalizing further about "bombs bursting in air."

The Army Band played well at the Capitol (Friday) until it turned on the tears just at the point where a Wagnerian might vivify the rockets and bombs.

On Thursday night while seated at the Lincoln Memorial end of the reflecting pool I heard another band, apparently in the Sylvan Theater, execute "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the same general manner—good instrumentation, but a directed change in spirit and tempo.

Which brings me to the declaration that the most thrilling rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" I ever heard was two years ago by Creatore's Band (all Italians) in the Chautauqua Institution on Chautauqua Lake, N. Y. in the summer of 1934. Creatore put into the music all the punch to be derived from the episodic words. Awed thousands momentarily were hushed—then crashing applause that was spontaneous, not perfunctory patriotic handclapping.

Somewhere in the last year I read instructions to soften the national anthem in the aforementioned part, and I know it to be common among American bandsmen. Maybe it is a sop to the virtual abandonment of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," too stirring for the cocktail era.

Though I do not like to smash idols unless I can erect better ones, I must comment that circumstances of its composition indicate the words of the national anthem might have been fitted to "Sweet Adeline" if that blow-off time then had been known. But since we were given another time of somewhat doubtful ancestry, why not make the most of the "rockets and bombs." Give it all you have, like the Swedish male choruses do their spirited "Hor Us Svea."

Jamboree Litter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Three weeks ago the Boy Scout Jamboree officially adjourned. We were told, before occupation, that all litter and debris incident to this occupation would be taken care of without delay and those beautiful stretches along the Potomac, around the Tidal Basin and the Monument grounds, of which we are all so proud, promptly restored to their former beauty. Has this been done?

Take a trip around the Lincoln Memorial, down to Hains Point and back to the Monument grounds. True, the Army tents disappeared quite promptly after a Congressman had called attention to the possibility of their being occupied by hunger strikers unless removed without further delay. But what of the bricks, straw, lumber, ropes, stakes—a general "mess," which now makes those once beautiful vistas look like Hogan's Alley or an island of the West Indies after a hurricane had passed that way?

Is everybody now waiting for the other fellow to do it?

Stuck In The Dakotas?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thoroughly enjoy the articles of Tom McCarthy, or did until he began giving us an overdose of the Dakotas. Is he permanently stuck there? Doesn't he know there are other Western States?

Wild Bill Hikok, Calamity Jane, Lead—all these are an old story to us, but he acts as if they were just discovered. For heaven's sake, tell him to move on and tell us something about Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, to say nothing of California, all of which are rich in history and romance. The Dakotas are interesting, but enough is enough. READER.

The Failure Of Fascism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is too bad that our militant local Fascist, Alfio Carta, has only his own word to back up his assertion that fascism "is backed by all classes in Italy." In strange contradiction to the statements of Alfio Carta, are the reports by the anti-Fascist Italian, Maj. Humberto Galleani, organizer of the Garibaldi Brigade.

Perhaps Mr. Carta can explain how 4,000 Italians are fighting for democracy in Loyalist Spain against the Fascist Italian and German invaders. Also, we would like to know why it is necessary to inform the soldiers of Italy that they are going to be used to fight in Ethiopia, when their objective is Spain. Again, Mr. Carta might explain why he is wasting his time in Democratic America if conditions are so good at home.

An Italian-American who recently returned from his homeland informed the writer that everywhere he went there was only monotony and despair—his family, his relatives, his friends were all looking with dread toward tomorrow—they were afraid to speak, if they criticized the dictator or complained about the low wages and general condition of the country, they would be sentenced to prison or death, depending on their crime against the totalitarian state.

Of course, this applies only to the working people—the wealthy classes, the clergy and the military are free, under certain conditions, but even the upper classes do not enjoy the freedom they have in America. Also, and this is eloquent proof of the failure of fascism—why is it that Italian art and culture is so burdened by despair that it would be better dead than as it is—only half alive? Again, what mother in the world would not rather have a live son than a tin medal for a dead youth who blindly gave his life to defend a mad dictator's dream of imperial conquest? Poor Mr. Carta, an opium addict has better dreams.

"Roosevelt Debt?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the national debt reaches the stupendous total of nearly $37,000,000,000, the people face the necessity of tax burdens that have no parallel.

The debt is a stern and abiding reality. No election landslide against the New Deal can remove it. It will hang as a millstone about the neck of the Nation long after Mr. Roosevelt retires from power. Voters can unload him, but they cannot unload the debt nor the taxes that will be required to pay it.

Much of it has been piled up by Mr. Roosevelt together with Congresses dominated by him. In justice it should be habitually called the Franklin D. Roosevelt debt. Taxes required to pay the debt should be called Franklin D. Roosevelt taxes.

That terminology would place responsibility where it justly belongs. It would stress New Deal prodigality and make it permanently so odious that voters would not soon bring on a repetition of the squandering carnival.

The Painters' Strike.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The painters' strike on Government relief work is unjust and un-American. Why should the union men who represent only 3 per cent of the 130,000,000 population receive all the relief money on the Procurement and Greenbelt paint jobs?

The Greenbelt czar played his iron hand. I hope Admiral Peoples will have honor enough to divide up the work. HARRY FORD.

Subsidies And Housing.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in a recent article in The Washington Post (July 30th) a statement regarding rents and subsidies in connection with the housing projects of the District Alley Authority. This statement is at least misleading and if allowed to go unexplained may give aid to the enemies of the pending Wagner-Steagall Housing bill.

Speaking of low rents charged for these alley dwellings, the statement reads, "This does not represent a subsidy of any kind." Nonetheless, a study of the facts involved reveals certain qualifying conditions. The chief of these is that the land cost as here involved is paid for out of funds appropriated by the Congress and this cost is retained on the books as such. As a result it follows that amortization of this capital cost does not enter into the rent prices charged. In other words, and in a sense the land is free, whereas in most housing projects in this country and abroad, land costs are frankly recognized as part of the total cost and have to be met in some way or other such as by subsidy or income from the property itself.

While in the strictest sense this District land purchase policy may not be considered a subsidy, nonetheless, handling the matter of land cost in this manner is tantamount to the same thing, small though it may be in some instances.

In this connection let me also add a word of praise for the work of the Alley Authority, which is generally recognized as being excellent.

The Scottsboro Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your editorial of July 26 concerning the Scottsboro case. I wish to congratulate you on your courageous championship of justice for those nine innocent victims. The United States can well realize that its pages are marred by one blot which can never be erased—a blot caused by blind prejudice and ignorance on the part of Alabama. Although the United States cannot wholly eradicate the supreme sin of one of its members, it can in a measure counteract the wrong by insisting upon and providing fair trials for the remaining victims of the most outrageous frame-up that this country has ever known.

It is my hope that The Post, by its fearless and outspoken editorials, will continue to direct public sentiment in the pathway of justice. To this end, more power to you! (MISS) LILLIE T. VADEN.

Dropped By The WPA.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At times the daily papers receive the information from some source of how private industry is absorbing the unemployed, thereby taking some of the burden off the WPA. Something must be wrong somewhere, for on July 1 this year there were at least 200 white-collar workers put off of WPA who today do not have a chance of securing work in private industry. This is not just guess work or imagination. It is a fact. Today most of those Negroes are faced with hunger and stand chances of being put out into the streets.

Is it the intention of the WPA higher-ups to deliberately starve or make criminals out of those Negroes? Why force people to be beggars and thieves who wish to be self-respecting?

I sincerely believe that it is in the plan of God that every man has a right to live. And that is all that these workers ask for in this great country of plenty—a chance to earn a living. I. LETTE.

The Scottsboro Case.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Alabama should bow her head in shame and apologize to the Nation for the atrocious way in which the Scottsboro case was handled. If one can believe one-half which has been printed, there was little cause for those youths being held for trial.

The Post Impressionist

Hey, George!

LEST I offend his ghost or those who worship his memory, the name shall be withheld. I shall only say that he wrote something to the effect that "a rose by any other name . . ."

Erudition being so general today, I have no doubt that many of tnose belonging to the classes about which I write are able to recite his works at more length than am I. And my only hope is that they will not, quotationally speaking, have an opportunity to do so in my presence. Because B. S. said so doesn't necessarily make it right; and anyway, I'm a realist.

My purpose is to broaden the idea espoused by the Bard. I am prompted to enter this seemingly controversial sphere because of mention in the public prints, of the formation of a club, the intent of which is to lay taboo upon the calling of Pullman porters by the very euphonious name, "George." Just why there should be resentment against calling these servants of rolling palaces on steel rails, "George," is a mystery to me. They are, as I've found it, both courteous and efficient, and so no ignominy entails for those who are namesakes, or, to turn it about, for those whose namesakes they are.

Calling one who serves one by a generally used name in no sense lowers the name's prestige—if names in common usage may be said to possess prestige. Or, if not George, then what—Demosthenes, Solinus, Thesus, Caius? Or yet, Percival, Reginald, Charlesworth; heaven forbid, Harold? George is an accepted he-man name which no amount of philandering can bring to ridicule.

Surveying the possibilities, one might, of course, upon entering a Pullman, introduce oneself to the porter, formally, as one who is traveling in his car. Luggage satisfactorily arranged, berth merits discussed and accepted, one could then say: "I'll visit the smoking compartment shortly to note officially from the card there, just how I should address you in future. Meantime, should I need service, so there shall be no ill-feeling between us, and because I do not wish during this interim to employ an intimate cognomen, may I not say, 'I thank you, Anonymity?'"

"Me, boss?"

"You."

"I apprec'tes it, suh. Yo' shoes is sho goin' shine bright when yo' lan' at Atlan'a."

Again, a fellow given-named George, could turn British for the nonce, and in affable but not too loud voice, exclaim: "Edward Albert Christian (omitting the George here) Andrew Patrick David Windsor, when do we arrive at Greensboro?" This might be catalogued as the "hit or miss" approach. The drawback is, that should it become national in scope, international complications might arise, involving the State Department.

The real flaw lies, perhaps, in the efficacy of such procedure as regards the porter himself. I would say that it would avail nothing or even less, if that were possible. Pullman porters are trained men; trained for service. Levity at their expense is not, I presume, relished by them, though I've seen it absorbed by many through sets of white teeth, result of broad grins. It isn't, I've found, what you call 'em, but rather how you treat 'em—and what you give 'em.

To me, always, the most humiliating address is the simple word "you." As say, "Hey, you!" It carries servitude and contempt to their very depths.

One of the most terrific free-for-alls I ever witnessed was when a companion, seated in a cafe with me, upon becoming impatient because table service was slow, snapped his fingers at a passing waiter. Garcon (rather good, eh?), busy, hot and sweaty, turned about on his heels, belligerently.

"I'm no dog!" he barked.

"I demand service," countered my friend, rising, also heated.

"I'll accommodate you," came the rejoinder.

It developed into quite a fracas.

That episode taught me to keep my fingers crossed when restaurant service is a little slow on a busy day or night, for after all, we are just humans together milling about, one way or another.

The adventure's culmination will ever remain in my memory. Smoke of battle cleared, cups and plates and glasses rearranged, the waiter said quite casually: "When you want me, call for me by name. 'George!' Don't ever snap your fingers at me—just 'George.'"

The manager, discussing the affair a few minutes later in amiable fashion, assured us "Salvatore is a good waiter, but——"

"But," I remonstrated, "it was 'George' with whom we had trouble, not 'Salvatore.' He told us——"

"Ah," confided the manager, "all our waiters are 'George' to our patrons."

Boating At Newport.

NO OTHER SPORT event in the world receives the ridicule that is flung at the races for the America's Cup, in which very expensive but utterly useless little sissy boats take themselves out to sea for a few hours to sail 30 miles in a competition for a silver pot which has spent most of its 80 years wrapped up in flannels in a vault and only a few hundred souls have ever seen. For a fact, it is a fantastic business, an almost unbelievable frivolity of the very rich.

Of the thousands who follow the two ships along the gentle swells, only a few have the faintest notion what it is all about, and Saturday afternoon, for example, the sailboats were across the line and well on their way before the people in the tag-along fleet were aware that the race was on, and then only guessed that this was so because the ships timidly broke ranks and started after. But, as a spectacle of wealth and luxury against an immediate background of vulgar toil and practical commerce, the show has its points.

NEWPORT, OF COURSE, is the old American stronghold of the idle heirs of ruthless patriots, and the very name of the town smells of the antics of that dear, dear boy, Harry Lehr, the male butterfly who loved nice things, and of a society dinner long ago at which the guest of honor was a bored baboon in evening clothes who treated the 400 as his equals.

But, as in Palm Beach and every other private refuge of the rich minority, there must be quarters for the lower class who sell the groceries and mow the lawns, and Newport has her grubby little streets along the waterfront, and, across the bay from the society side, her coal docks, fish wharves and oil tanks, all very unsightly, to be sure, but a comfort nevertheless. They give proof through the night that the type of people who produce the dividends for successive generations of Newport heirs are still there and still producing.

The harbor is choked with private boats called yachts, although the word is rather modest, for many of these craft, which are really private liners, and the imagination curls up and quits after a brief attempt to estimate how much they cost to build and what it must take to keep them running.

A big, hollow, dingy boat with a sign "Ferry" on her, and a few working stiffs sitting on benches in her cockpit, comes along, carrying them home at quitting time and runs under the stern of a private ship as big as a freighter. The ladies and gents are having a glass of something under the awning, and from the sound of their laughter some of them seem a mite equiffed.

The fresh water barge goes through the fleet, calling on the trade, for water is drunk, too, and the gasoline float lies off a little, serving fuel to those who use that kind of fuel. In the morning, much too early and too damned bright for tortured souls who didn't tumble in until dawn, the newsboy comes along in his boat, bleating his cry of "morning papers." A nuisance, he, but necessary, for otherwise how can people know what crazy business that Roosevelt has been up to overnight and who entertained whom and how?

T. O. M. SOPWITH, the English owner and skipper of the Endeavour II, has four boats present, two racers and two great ocean passenger vessels, and they take the play away from the race in popular imagination, for they suggest money, money, and sport gets forgotten in a sense of awe at wealth so vast in one man's possession.

Mr. Sopwith got his building airplanes for the British army in the war, and, as one who helped mightily to save the day and make Britain a place fit for heroes to live in, as Lloyd George promised, he seems entitled to a boat as big as any hereditary American millionaire's. But two big ocean ships!

Great boats swing at their chains in the quiet harbor against the shoreline stretch of coal bins, tanks and all, whose names you never even heard, and if you look them up in the register you find that they belong to American millionaires that you never heard of, either.

How much have they got and where did they get it, and what is their attitude toward a minimum wage of $16 a week, or just about enough to buy polish for the bright work?

But a minimum wage of $16 a week is very remote from the race flotilla in Newport Harbor, except those reminders in the papers which the boy brings alongside from the other world too early in the morning, piping his cry like a seagull after slops.

Well, for sports the boat race isn't much, but for contrast it has no beat.

Convention Souvenirs.

Secretary—It's here.

Businessman—What's here?

Secretary—the 1936 history of the Democratic National Convention.

Businessman—Just forget it.

Secretary—But we can't forget it; the truck is blocking the entrance.

Businessman—Truck? Do they deliver it by truck?

Secretary—You bought $5,000 worth, you know.

Businessman (quite nettled)—Tell the truckman to take them away; tell him he can have them.

Secretary—I told him that, sir, but he just laughed.

• • • •

Businessman (rather harassed)—Did you explain to him that these books had Mr. Roosevelt's personal autograph in every copy?

Secretary—Yes. He laughed at that too . . . Said the market was flooded.

Businessman (hopelessly)—I suppose we'll just have to take 'em. Tell him to dump them in Chute No. 8.

(The curtain will be lowered to denote a lapse of about 20 minutes.)

• • • •

Businessman (as the secretary reappears with an armful of souvenir books)—Well, did he dump 'em all in?

Secretary—There wasn't room in the cellar for all of 'em, so I brought a few up here, thinking you might dispose of a few to friends.

Businessman—Don't be an ass; a businessman has no friends these days. Take 'em home.

Secretary—But we have plenty of reading matter home, sir

Businessman—Don't you need anything to put under wobbly table legs?

Secretary—the kitchen table is very wobbly, but the wife has a book she puts under that.

Businessman—But not a book with the President's signature. Think of the satisfaction of having a Roosevelt under the table.

• • • •

Secretary—I think the particular book we are using happens to be autographed by Mr. Roosevelt. Back when he was Governor.

Businessman (urgently)—Ah, but that was back when he knew all about his autographs. The value of these convention souvenir autographs rests in the fact that the President didn't know how these autographs were going to be used.

Secretary—Are you sure it gives it more value?

Businessman—Oh, of course. Thousands of noted men sign their names to papers, books, documents, et cetera, about which they have all the facts, but how many men attach their signatures to papers without having the slightest idea for whom or for what? These autographs may go down in history and become quite priceless among collectors as the Roosevelt Caprice Autograph.

Secretary—By George, you're right. I think I'll keep. . . .

Businessman (convinced by his own argument and grabbing the books away)—No you won't. I guess I'll keep them myself after all. You never can tell!

Virginia Primary

Today's Balloting In Old Dominion May Reveal Strength Of New Deal Forces As Against Byrd Organization.

By G. W. Lineweaver.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

VIRGINIA'S Democratic State-wide primary today may not be in reality a referendum on the New Deal. But the results will indicate what progress, if any, New Dealers are making toward wresting control of the party organization in the Old Dominion from the State's junior Senator and former Governor, Harry Flood Byrd, or punishing him for "independence" of the Roosevelt Administration.

As the only Southern State holding a primary this year for the nomination of State officials, the Virginia battle has more than ordinary significence. It is not so much who wins in the contests for the three major State offices that mean election in November under the "short ballot" plan, one of the reforms Byrd initiated while Governor. The implications affecting the congressional elections next year and control of the State's delegation at the national convention in 1940 are also wrapped up in the situation in no small degree. Senator Byrd himself is up for re-election in 1940.

Oddly enough, the picture in the Virginia primary does not center around the gubernatorial nomination, usually the chief prize in a State primary of this type. Neither of the two candidates is running with the blessing of the organization and next January the capitol at Richmond will see the inauguration of the first Governor in 20 years who has not had the support of the dominant party faction.

Until early this year, "everybody," as professional commentators say, thought an organization candidate would be brought out against Lieut. Gov. James H. Price, twice elected to that place without opposition. Price has never been a "Byrd" man in Virginia politics and the popular belief was that when he went in as lieutenant governor twice he was shelved from a successful contest for the governorship. No lieutenant governor has succeeded the chief executive of Virginia since 1866, although several have tried.

Price Looked Upon As A New Dealer.

NUMEROUS trial balloons for organization candidates were put out, but none aroused enthusiasm, and for a time it looked as if Price would win the governorship by default. That made the faithful in the big State jobs, subject to appointment by a Governor, exceedingly uncomfortable. It was then reported that Price would be good and that the organization stalwarts at the capitol would hold on.

The stalwarts, thereupon, set about lining up to save the two remaining offices. For lieutenant governor and presiding officer of the State senate, the veteran Saxon W. Holt, for 35 years a senator from Newport News and a close friend of Senator Byrd, was chosen to succeed Price in his present job. A. P. Staples, of Roanoke, appointed attorney general in 1934 on the death of John R. Saunders, was backed to succeed himself.

The "antis," who have laid claim to Price as a New Dealer and an anti-Byrd hope for years, picked for lieutenant governor the wealthy State Senator Robert W. Daniel, of Surry County. Daniel has been a member of the powerful State Board of Education since 1930 and is serving his first term in the senate. For attorney general, until July 1, the opposition was split between Worth Smith, brother of Representative Howard Smith, Alexandria, and John Galleher, Leesburg. The latter resigned as National Emergency Council director of Virginia to give "friends of President Roosevelt" a chance to vote for a New Deal candidate for chief law officer of the State. Smith withdrew when Galleher refused to step out.

In the meantime, State Senator Vivian L. Page, Norfolk, withdrew as a candidate for lieutenant governor and bolted Price, whom he charged with favoring Daniel after promising to be neutral. The campaign was slow in getting under way and for a time Price deemed it necessary to make a fight.

However, in recent weeks, Page, who led the fight for prohibition repeal in the Legislature for years, stirred things. He announced a platform and challenged Price to state his record. Finally the lieutenant governor came out with a few speeches, stressed his approval of the Roosevelt farm and social legislation. He identified himself with the national administration to such an extent that Page charged him with "tying himself to the President's coat tails."

During the campaign Price came to Washington and was escorted to the White House, not by either of the Virginia Senators, but by the then Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, another Virginian who had been credited with ambitions to be Governor while serving in the National House. That helped to identify Price with the Roosevelt Administration. With the antiorganization spokesmen proclaiming that Price would inaugurate a New Deal at Richmond, Page's friends hope for substantial organization support at the polls.

Daniel Under Fire As "Economic Loyalist."

Daniel's wealth and career in New York as a banker and capitalist are the subjects of organization fire and the opposition suggests that he is a "reformed economic royalist" with ambitions to assume the leadership of the party in Virginia and take Senator Byrd's seat in 1940. Nevertheless, Daniel has developed unexpected strength and his support includes some curious bedfellows.

The United Mine Workers in the Southwest Virginia coal fields, where Representative John W. Flannagan is leading the fight for him, have endorsed Daniel and called on labor to support him as a friend of the Roosevelt program. Others who have endorsed the former banker include a number of prominent Richmond lawyers, including the general counsel of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.

The Richmond area presents an added attraction. In the third congressional district, a candidate will be nominated to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Representative A. J. Montague. Dave E. Satterfield, who was narrowly defeated by Montague in 1936, is being opposed by State Senator Gordon Ambler, running on a New Deal platform. He has declared for Roosevelt and all of his program.

Virginia has a somewhat restricted electorate with prepayment of poll taxes six months before an election required. Since there was little excitement when the tax books closed, many voters failed to qualify. This is claimed as an advantage for the party organization, adept at getting out enough of the faithful on the books to command a substantial majority in a State-wide primary.

State Machine Still Powerful.

NO OBSERVER who has watched Virginia politics in the last decade or two, underestimates the power and strength of the State organization. Senator Byrd succeeded to the leadership in 1920 following the death of his uncle, Representative Hal Flood, although for a time the reins were handled in co-operation with the present Secretary of the Navy, Claude A. Swanson.

Since 1933 Senator Byrd has been devoting his time primarily to his duties in Washington and has left the operations of State affairs and politics largely to his lieutenants. Many say the latter have fumbled the ball with results that may throw Virginia into a real political turmoil.

No Opposition To Byrd Reforms.

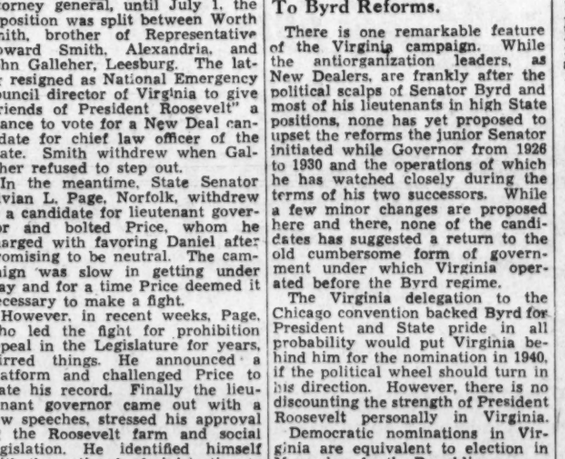

There is one remarkable feature of the Virginia campaign. While the antiorganization leaders, as New Dealers, are frankly after the political scalps of Senator Byrd and most of his lieutenants in high State positions, none has yet proposed to upset the reforms the junior Senator initiated while Governor from 1926 to 1930 and the operations of which he has watched closely during the terms of his two successors. While a few minor changes are proposed here and there, none of the candidates has suggested a return to the old cumbersome form of government under which Virginia operated before the Byrd regime.

The Virginia delegation to the Chicago convention backed Byrd for President and State pride in all probability would put Virginia behind him for the nomination in 1940, if the political wheel should turn in his direction. However, there is no discounting the strength of President Roosevelt personally in Virginia.

Democratic nominations in Virginia are equivalent to election in November, for the Republicans, even before being robbed of Federal patronage, have cut little figure in State elections since 1881. That being conceded, if the new Governor ousts the organization lieutenants and gets away with it before the Legislature, the results of the primary of 1937 may be expected to have an important bearing on future control of the Democratic Party in Virginia and may even affect the national situation as between New Dealers and conservatives.

The Mutiny In Eastern Hopei.

THE WAR MADNESS which is gripping Japan is destructive of reason, as all such psychoses invariably are. With patriotic passions aroused, the clamor is for victory, no matter at what cost or under what circumstances.

No doubt there will be more victories won. The record of almost uninterrupted triumph over the decadent Manchu Empire, the Russia of the Czars, the German garrison at Tsingtau, the poorly equipped and miserably led Chinese armies in Manchuria, is hardly likely to be broken at this time.

The situation may change if Chiang Kai-shek throws into the balance his well-trained and highly disciplined corps and if an aroused Chinese people takes up arms against the invaders. But even then the odds would clearly be on the side of the Japanese. Their army is undoubtedly superior in everything but numbers against any army which China may throw into the breach.

BUT VICTORY, as Edith Cavell said of patriotism, is not enough. If it is to be made to pay dividends a victory must be consolidated. And there are victories that have to be won over and over again.

Japan's irruption in North China may be subject to that reservation. Events may prove that the most significant development during the past feverish fortnight in that part of the world was not the capture of Peiping or the smashing of the Chinese forces at Tientsin, but the mutiny of the troops of Yin Ju-keng at Tungchow.

Were the Japanese capable of taking thought at this time their enthusiasm for the war in China might undergo a very considerable deflation once they took the larger implications of that mutiny into their calculations. For that mutiny outlines the shape of things to come; it is the future made visible.

So far as the Kwantung army leaders were concerned Yin was a man after their own hearts. He was Japanese-educated. He is married to a Japanese. He does not subscribe to any nationalistic nonsense. And he has shown an eager readiness to feather his own nest.

THE JAPANESE can be very generous when it suits their purposes to be. They were willing to permit Yin a considerable measure of indulgence and the outward trappings of powers as well.

The Autonomous Area of Eastern Hopei, the mouthfilling official name for Yin's puppet regime, was in line with their own ideas. It meant the alienation from Nanking authority of a strategically important part of North China. And it permitted Japan to deal a serious blow to Nanking by permitting the region to become a great smuggling center through which Japanese goods could be funneled into China without paying the heavy duties imposed by the central Chinese government.

The situation was eminently satisfactory. It had all of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of direct rule. Indeed, there might have been none of the present bloodshed and destruction in North China if the other Chinese generals had been as amenable to Japanese arguments as Yin Ju-keng had been.

Yet the enormously important fact is that the moment tensions in North China became acute, after the incident of July 7, the most violent repercussions occurred in eastern Hopei. There the peace preservation corps not only kidnapped their leader, Yin Ju-keng, but also proceeded to massacre the Japanese garrison at Tungchow.

IN A VERY DRAMATIC fashion what happened at Tungchow has been happening, if on a smaller scale and without much publicity, in Manchuria, where the work of "pacification" has to be done over and over again. And it is bound to happen everywhere in Chinese territory that the Japanese happen to make their own.

There are three principal ways of ruling a conquered land. It can be ruled directly. It can be ruled with the voluntary consent of the subjugated peoples. And it can be ruled through the leverage which the army of the dominant power can exert on elements willing to serve as the willing tools of the conquerors.

So far as China is concerned, domination with the voluntary consent of the people is impossible. Direct rule, on the other hand, is expensive and unsatisfactory. In North China and in Manchuria the Japanese have tried the third method. But the Tungchow mutiny shows that it, too, is fraught with danger.

RULING THROUGH puppets is safe so long as the puppets are amenable and so long as the conquered people are placid or divided. This is a lesson Japan has learned from the other imperialist powers.

In Manchuria they have not followed the procedure they adopted in Korea. Manchuria has not directly been annexed to Japan. It is presumably an "independent" nation. Its independence, as all the world knows, happens to be a myth, but a convenient myth, nevertheless. It permits the Japanese to exercise authority without responsibility by leaning on a class of Chinese prepared to do the bidding of their masters. Divide and rule.

It is the art of the great conquering nations of history. It was the rule of Rome. It has been the policy pursued by Great Britain in that vast sub-continent which is India. In that land there are only 57,000 regular British troops in a population numbering over 300,000,000. India's disunity is Britain's strength. Or has been. For Great Britain is now in retreat in India because the principle of divide and rule no longer works as smoothly as it once did.

The winds of nationalism are blowing over India and bit by bit the sense of a common patriotism is overcoming the particularism of Hindu and Moslem, Brahmin and untouchable, Sikh and Parsee. The British are wise enough to realize this. They are not overplaying their hand. By a show of liberalism they are saving as much as they can of the enormously valuable stake in India.

THE SAME WINDS of nationalism are blowing over China. To their age-old sense of differentness from the other peoples there is now being added the modern emotions of patriotism. And it is that factor which bears within it the seeds of endless trouble for Japan.

What happened at Tungchow is a portent. For it means that the only effective way Japan can keep China, or any considerable part of it, in subjugation is by means of an army of occupation. And such an army would have to be so great as to drain dry Japan's meager resources.

Before exploding through overexertion the frog who, in Aesop's fable, wanted to be an ox could exultantly exclaim:

"See how very much bigger I've become!"

Riley Again

By William Lyon Phelps

Homage To Him.

I do not know whether I am more irritated or more amused by the conventional attitude of young critics toward Riley. Here is a national poet, some of whose poems will live for centuries, who is known in hundreds of thousands of American homes, and whose personality is a pervasive and powerful influence. Yet the conventional attitude of the reviewers is ironical or condescending.

In 12 years the 100th anniversary of Riley birth will be celebrated in every part of the United States.

Well, two things have come to my notice within the last few days that have given me pleasure. In Greenfield, Ind., where Riley was born, there has been organized the Riley Old Home Society. The family homstead, where Riley's earliest poems were written, has been put in beautiful condition, and every room furnished in such a fashion that it is not a museum, but looks as if the family were living there as they did in 1870. In the Indianapolis Sunday Star for June 20 there is a full-page article by Mary E. Bostwick, copiously illustrated, that gives a description of the house, of the society, and of the plans made for preservation. Among other things, the citizens of Greenfield have spent over $60,000 in purchasing and developing Riley Memorial Park, which surrounds the site of the Old Swimming Hole.

• • • •

The other thing that pleased me is an article in the Saturday Review for July 3, by Donald C. Peattie called Riley as a Nature Poet. After speaking of the inaccuracy of most poets in dealing with nature, Mr. Peattie, giving excellent illustrations from Riley's poems, calls him a nature poet of the first rank. I cannot express too strongly how refreshing to me are the following sentences in this admirable article:

"And to my ear, at least, not only does Riley write the way the Midwestern child and farmer still often speak, but in setting style to subject his sense of pitch is nearly absolute. He vies with the grand masters of regional American literature, the Mark Twain of 'Huckleberry Finn,' the Lowell of the 'Bigelow Papers,' and the Harris of 'Uncle Remus.'"

Tom McCarthy

'And for Dessert, Madame?'

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 31.—There's a tingling suspense in being backstage just before the curtain goes up at the theater. You can get that same feeling in a great hotel, just before the bell sounds the warning for the waiters to take their stations in the main dining room. Waiters, I discovered while working in the dining room of the Broadmoor Hotel at Colorado Springs, have a lot in common with actors. A good waiter's principal job is not the serving of food . . . it is the creation of an illusion.

TOM McCARTHY.

People come to resort hotels for a variety of reasons. They want to forget their troubles. They want a change. The aged want care they can't get elsewhere. Whatever their reason for coming, people like most the thrill of being "king for a day."

They like to have their wishes anticipated; and a great hotel is one of the few places where this happens to them. They like to snap their fingers and find that to wish is to accomplish. Waiters know that their job is the creation of an illusion, and it is interesting to watch them preparing for their parts.

THEY MUST APPEAR fresh, tireless, pleasant. They must be immaculately dressed. Their voice must be well modulated and their bearing must be at least semimilitary. After working at the hotel for a few days, I decided that a good waiter must have the deftness of an artist, the tact of a diplomat and the soul of a pool-hall lounger. The last is important. Above all, he must remain unruffled and the only way to achieve this is to maintain an outward concern and an inner indifference.

As the hands of the clock creep toward the meal hour, the subterranean corridors of a great hotel become alive with men and women in uniform. Waiters, lounging about indolently, come to attention, flip the cigarettes from their mouths and speed down the corridors to the locker rooms.

Wrinkled shirts and golf trousers are tossed aside. Dark trousers, starched shirt fronts and white jackets take their place. The shirt fronts are detachable and the waiter, while retaining his appearance of careful grooming, is actually very comfortably dressed. The upper part of his costume is comprised simply of a false shirt front, vest and linen jacket.

There is a good deal of laughter and small talk when work is through. But as the zero hour approaches there is a "curtain time" tension. The tie is given a final tug, the hair a final pat and chest out, the waiter goes in to play his part.

THE WAITERS have all taken their places, before any of the diners arrive. If the headwaiter and the captains are absent they may gather to discuss the prospects for the meal. The "maitre d'" has already informed them if a large crowd is expected.

For every several waiters there is a bus boy. The bus boy has his part in making the service a success. He must see that butter, ice and water are constantly supplied to the diners and see that the sideboards are kept cleared of used dishes. The waiters must always have room to place their trays. Since the size of the tip depends on the customer's frame of mind, the waiter may warn the bus boy to be sure that the fat gentleman in the corner is never without butter. On the other hand, the bald-headed banker will be angry if any butter is placed on his dish.

The bus boy does well to heed the waiter's advice. If the waiter is dissatisfied with him, he will probably be fired. If the bus boy co-operates, the waiter will give him a percentage of the tips.

When the first diners arrive, the waiters come to attention and the show is on!

The early arrivals get excellent service. There is no need for unusual haste. The captain may assist the waiter in serving the meal. After a time, however, the dining room becomes crowded and captains, waiters and bus boys race about in a state bordering on a mild frenzy.

The kitchen becomes a madhouse as waiters, dishwashers, cooks and food-checkers are galvanized into action. Nerves grow taut as tons of food are loaded at fevered speed into small plates and carried at a half run into the dining room. A bus boy threatens to fight with a waiter. The waiter set his tray on the bus boy's, just as the latter was about to remove it. A captain passes through the kitchen and breaks up the embryo fight, with a warning that both will lose their jobs. Waiters curse at the food-checkers for slowing them up and a girl washing glasses throws water on a bus boy.

NERVES CRACK in the kitchen, too. Shouts, snarls and shoves give an eccentric impetus to the bedlam. But as they pass through the doors into the dining room, faces reform into courteous, obsequious and vaguely pleasant masks.

The orchestra begins to play, and to the workers, it forms a weird background for the dizzying whirl. The bus boys, with sweat rolling down their faces, hoist loaded trays with one hand, pray that the dishes will stay put and, on the run, make the circle from dining room to kitchen to dining room. While serving the meal from the sideboard, the waiter mumbles curses at a too demanding customer, only to turn with a face which conveys the lie that it is a pleasure to be of service.

Orders are whipped out, from the side of a mouth, and the language is the language of the trade. "Butter the deuce" means that the table for two in the corner needs more butter. "Ice the trey" means that the table of three wants more ice water.

After an hour of whirling in and out of the dining room, sidestepping customers and fellow waiters, faces become almost indistinguishable. The orchestra swings into blue rhythm and the throaty singer asks "Won't you come along with me—'way down the Mississippi?" The walls appear to rock and the tall couple dancing in the middle of the floor look like some misshapen apparition from a Gothic cathedral.

Rising above the sweep of strings and the moan of the saxophone comes the clear tinkle of breaking glass. A customer starts in his chair and looks angrily at the apologetic bus boy who has knocked a glass from a table. A headwaiter clenches his hands and, if this is not the boy's first offense it may well be his last. Dishes may be broken in the kitchen without fatal consequences. The dining room is something else again.

All the while the diners relax in their comfortable chairs, commenting on the pleasures of a leisurely meal, object loudly and vocally at any small omissions of service and wonder why in the world their lamb chop has been delayed three minutes. Because their waiter approaches them smilingly and deftly serves they think his task the easiest in the world. They do not know that he has come with a loaded tray for the twentieth time on a dead run through the kitchen; that he is endeavoring to control his breathing; that he is balancing forward stiffly on the balls of his feet; that he is straining to still the shaking of his hand as he carefully removes a plate and asks: "And for desert, Madame?"

Cobb Resigns As Director of Southern AAA

Former Agricultural Editor Expects to Resume Old Work Sept. 1.

By the Associated Press.

Cully—A. Cobb, of Atlanta, Ga., resigned yesterday from the directorship of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration's southern division.

J. B. Hutson, acting administrator, said no action would be taken immediately on the resignation because of the absence of Secretary Henry Wallace and Administrator J. B. Tolley.

Cobb, who joined the AAA in May, 1933, to direct the cotton plow-up campaign which took about 14,000,000 acres of cotton out of production, was en route to Auburn, Ala., for a speaking engagement there today.

Officials said the 53-year-old Southern editor expected to return to private pursuits about September 1. He was editor of the Southern Ruralist from 1919 to 1930, and vice president and an editor of the Progressive Farmer and Southern Ruralist immediately preceding his AAA appointment.

Cobb was made Southern division director early in 1936 when the administration was reorganized on a sectional rather than its original commodity basis. He was credited with exercising an important influence in participation of practically 60 per cent of the farmers in obtaining his section in the agricultural conservation program of 1936.

Non-College Men Eligible to Take U.S. Engineer Test

The Civil Service Commission yesterday opened the way for entrance into the higher-paid professional grades of the Federal service of persons without a college degree. A tradition, thereby, fell.

The examination in question, for grades beginning with assistant engineer, starting at $2,600 annually, will be open to applicants who have experience instead of college degrees. They will have a chance to stand a test involving practical experience. Those who pass this successfully wil be regarded in the same status of fellow competitors who hold college papers.

The commission, it was stated, has been confronted with cases of older engineers whose accomplishments mark them as capable but whose way to public service has been barred by the college degree requirement.

Left-Wing Peace Rally To Mark Date of War

Sponsored by the Communist and Socialist parties of Washington, a peace rally, marking the twenty-third anniversary of the outbreak of the World War, will be held at McPherson Square this afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The meeting will feature impromptu speakers and a general gathering in behalf of world peace. Martin Chancey is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Swiss in D. C. Area Celebrate Nation's 646th Anniversary

Quietly and almost unnoticed by "the greatest democratic nation," 200 countrymen of the oldest democratic nation observed Switzerland's 646th anniversary of independence on Sunday.

Swiss people from Washington and Baltimore held a picnic at Beiber's Farm, near Four Corners, Md. There they ate American hot dogs, toasted Switzerland's "Fourth of July," and listened to Dr. Edward Beer, Charge d'Affaires of the Legation, and Godfrey Mender, Washington attorney.

A rebroadcast of ceremonies in Switzerland, carried locally over station WRC, was the high point of the informal celebration.

Speaking in French, President Motta sent his greeting to America and said that every Swiss person regards the United States as his second homeland; he sent his greetings to President Roosevelt and stressed the similarities between the two peace-loving democracies.

Ruling Due Today In Michigan Row

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 2 (AP).—Whether Michigan's Legislature, called in special session last Friday, ended when the Senate chamber closed up and went home Friday midnight or whether it still remains legally in session because the House did not concur in the Senate's action probably will be determined tomorrow.

Since the Senate adjournment, which came after one member had struck another during an argument over Gov. Murphy's industrial relations bill, a handful of House members have been holding daily sessions. Subsequently they were joined by an upper Michigan member of the Senate, John C. Wickstrom, Demcorat, who called himself to order in the Senate and went through the motions of adjourning that body although no other members were in attendance.

Attorney General Raymond W. Starr has promised a ruling on the legal status of the special session not later than Tuesday afternoon.

Bahamas Observe 100 Years' Liberty

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 2 (AP).—Bahama colored residents whose forbears were slaves feasted and danced today to the beat of goatskin drums in celebration of a century of freedom, but the festivities lacked some of their old flavor.

Here at Fox Hill, virtually self-governing settlement, where the island celebrations center, Ma Robinson, probably the last survivor of the emancipation period and customarily a principal figure in the proceedings, was absent for the first time. Her legs failed her and she was confined to her cottage. Nevertheless, the woman, who says she is 104, entertained visitors and spun them yarns of the old days.

Elliott Roosevelt Buys Radio Station

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 2 (AP).—Sale of KABC, local broadcasting station, to Elliott Roosevelt was virtually completed today, Henry Lee Taylor, one of the three present owners, announced.

Crowley Urges Elimination of Unsound Banks

FDIC Chairman Cites Need of Reduction in Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

Unprofitable institutions might well be pruned out of the banking system, Chairman Leo T. Crowley, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, suggested yesterday.

Crowley said at a press conference that "if the number of banks could be reduced by 300 to 400 a year for the next 5 to 7 years, those that were left could make money."

"We would have a sound banking system that could withstand future depressions," he aded.

The FDIC, in co-operation with State banking supervisors, now is "working out a program to eliminate a lot of institutions that are unprofitable," Crowley continued. He said a pending survey will show what percentage of bank assets are in low-grade bonds and other "substandard" investments.

Reporting that the number of insured banks showed a net decrease of 86 during the six months ended June 30, Crowley said there were 13,887 operating commercial banks in the deposit insurance system on that date. Some State authorities are refusing charters to banks which cannot qualify or do not apply for deposit insurance, he said.

"The corporation's intention," Crowley continued, "is to deal decisively with unsound insured banks.

"Prior to July 1, 1937, 41 banks had been cited to the appropriate supervisory authorities for continued indulgence in unsafe and unsound practices and for violations of the law."

The FDIC, Crowley reported, chalked up a net $21,000,000 increase in its surplus during the first six months of this year. He said 179,601 depositors in 132 insolvent insured banks placed in receivership since 1933 had been paid 90 per cent of their claims.

Teachers Meeting In Tokyo Find War Is Hard to Ignore

Tokyo, Aug. 2 (AP).—The undeclared Japanese-Chinese war was interjected in the conference of the World Federation of Educational Associations when its formal sessions opened today.

Despite efforts of foreign delegates to maintain an atmosphere of impartiality they were given little chance to forget they were in a country preparing for conflict.

It was learned definitely that no Chinese delegation would attend.

Before the conference opening, the Japanese delegates, totaling more than 1,000, marched to the Meiji shrine and prayed for success of Japan's forces in China, as well as for success of the conference.

Dr. Paul Monroe, of Columbia University, chairman of the conference, tried especially to steer clear of war questions. His opening address stressed the "organization's purpose of promoting international good will through education.

The Japanese displayed especial interest in the views of Prof. Charles H. Thompson, of Howard University, Washington, D. C., representing American colored educational interests.

20,000 Old-Age Benefit Checks Going Begging

Board Combs Country for Payees, Hoping This Will Spur Listings.

The Social Security Board is "combing the country," it said yesterday, to locate approximately 20,000 workers for whom the Department of the Treasury is holding some money—under provisions of the social security act.

Ordinarily, a Government agency does not encourage its clients to file claims against the Treasury; but this is different.

The board believes that if it can get 20,000 social security checks into the field it will help considerably in efforts to get all the Nation's workers catalogued by number and into the social security files.

"The news that John Smith got $10 by having a social security number will not be slow in getting around, and it will bring in applicants from all unnumbered workers in that area," the board said.

Payments now due range from less than $5 to approximately $200. Almost 5,000 claims have been certified for payment by social security to date. The largest lump sum payment yet approved was for $192.50, which went to the estate of a Texas oil official who earned $6,000 from January 1 until his death March 11.

Applicants for numbers are reaching the board at the rate of 100,000 a day, but that is not fast enough to suit the officials—who are looking ahead to the time when business is going to be so rushing that to have to fill out "number cards" is going to be just a nuisance.

"In the natural order of things, it would take about two years for some people to hear about social security, but we're trying to get the news around a little faster than that. Our field workers have instructions to give every possible assistance in the preparation and filing of claims."

The advantage of a social security number is already being felt in the employment field. If six men are lined up for a job and the first five do not have social security cards, the job probably will go to the last one, the board said. Employers are thereby saved the trouble of having a card filled out, and the card is proof of previous employment, too.

An indication of the speed with which the mechanism of social security is moving is given in Treasury collections. During the first fiscal year, ended June 30, collections for the social security fund reached $252,160,000. Collections since June 30 already have totaled $51,232,000.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Department of Agriculture Orchestra (Walter Bauer, conductor; Irving Ginberg, soloist) in South Building Auditorium Monday night. Program: Symphony in F major, Op. 153 (Raff), Violin Concerto in G minor (Bruch), Waltz Movements from "Der Rosenkavalier" (Richard Strauss), Finale from "New England" Symphony (Stillman-Kelley).

Excavating among the numerous and mostly forgotten compositions of Joseph Joachim Raff, Dr. Walter Bauer brought to light last evening the third symphony, "Im Walde," and presented it to an audience that filled the cool auditorium. Thanks to the conducotr's policy of searching out neglected and meritorious music, and to the devoted application of the musicians, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra has interested the public to the extent that the concerts are now given in pairs in order to accommodate all the regular followers. The concert wil be repeated tonight, and more Washingtonians will hear one of the favorite symphonies of the 18th century's third quarter.

Of Raff's eleven symphonies, only the third and fifth, "Lenore," have had the vitality to survive in occasional appearances. "Im Walde" is the expression of the composer's deep love for natural beauty as manifested in the forests of Germany. Through its melodious movements, "The Wanderer" experiences the imaginative pleasures of a day in the woodland, which he enters in the brightness of noon and notes its changing phases through twilight and through the long night until dawn. Highly romantic in style, the music is a fine flower of its period, richly colored and poetically fragrant.

Another of Dr. Bauer's commendable revivals was the last movement of Edgar Stillman Kelley's "New England" symphony, an American work which deserves more frequent performance. It is a sturdy composition, excellently constructed and imbued with vigorous vitality. A tribute to the Pilgrims of Plymouth, it is thoroughly representative of the pioneering idealism which sought spiritual freedom in the wilderness of a new world.

Irving Ginberg, a member of the orchestra, gave a somewhat pale reading of Bruch's G minor concerto for violin. Apparently diffident, he did not take advantage of the emotional range and fervor of the music, remaining a passive rather than an active participant in its pulsating life. The program had, for its light section, the sophisticated waltzes that are scattered through "Der Rosenkavalier," that comedy in which Richard Strauss vainly emulated Mozart.

Army Surgeon Dies in Plane Crash as Son Watches

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Above is the wreckage of the plane at Fort Hoyle, Md., in which Maj. Guy Hart Moates, Langley Field flight surgeon, was burned to death and his pilot, Lieut. William Enyart, Army Air Corps Reserve, was hurt. Maj. Moates had visited his son, Guy, jr., a C. M. T. C. enrollee at Fort Hoyle, who witnessed the crash. The plane struck a tree in the take-off. Attaches at Walter Reed Hospital said Lieut. Enyart's chances for recovery were good.

A specialist will examine Edward Cannon, 25-year-old youth who broke his back Saturday when he dived into 4 feet of water at Crystal Beach, Md., but the boy's father, B. P. Cannon, doesn't know where he is going to get the money necessary to perform the delecate operation required to save his son's life.

Cannon, who is 56 years old and is employed by the WPA as a painter, only works 48 hours a month and must support his family of seven on his meager earnings. Sunday he borrowed $10 to have an ambulance remove his son from the Emergency Hospital in Annapolis to Emergency Hospital here.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," the elder Cannon said. "The dotcors say my son has 10 chances out of 100 to pull through, but he is in terrible pain now and they say an operation should be performed as soon as possible. I have only had my job a month and it pays me barely enough to keep my wife and children alive."

Howard Cannon, 19, another son, is somewhere in Pennsylvani,a, where he is driving his employer on a vacatoin trip. Mrs. Cannon appealed to police last night to help locate her son and inform him of his brother's condition.

Crowded in a small two-room apartment at 424 Third street northwest, the family has suffered one setback after another since coming to Washington three years ago from North Carolina.

Illinois Pension Denial Assailed

By the Associated Press.

Representative Allen (Republican) Illinois, last night called the Social Security Board's withdrawal of old-age grants to Illinois "an act of political reprisal against Gov. Horner for his recent open opposition to the Roosevelt schem to pack the Supreme Court."

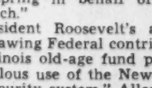

Allen described the board's action as the opening gun in the State-wide battle to be waged by the New Deal next spring in behalf of Senator Dieterich."

"President Roosevelt's action in withdrawing Federal contribution to the Illinois old-age fund presents a scandalous use of the New Deal social security system," Allen said.

"The Illinois act has been drafted in close consultation with Federal authorities and the measure, as finally placed upon the statute books, received the approval of the Social Security Board.

"Gov. Horner has denied his moral support to many of Roosevelt's proposals. It is known through Illinois that Gov. Horner has announced that he will not support Senator Dieterich in the primaries next spring. Therefore the Roosevelt-Farley machine has been unleashed against the Governor."

19 Pickets Arrested In Seattle Star Strike

Seattle, Aug. 2 (AP).—Eighteen men and one woman were arrested today on disorderly conduct charges as police dispersed about 50 American Newspaper Guild strikers at the Seattle Star entrance. Each was released on $25 bail.

Police permitted two strikers to picket the plant. Capt. J. J. Haag said he ordered the arrest of the 19 because they were blocking the entrance and were not picketing legally.

Policeman Backed In Ticket Squabble

The town council of Mount Rainier, Md., last night sided with Policeman Bernard Hysan in his quarrel with Mayor Norman A. Pruitt, for whom he refused to "take care of" a traffic ticket.

One member of the council, John Duever, speaking at the regular meeting, declared:

"I don't approve of the attitude of the mayor at the last meeting when he said, 'I can go around the corner and get another officer to take Hysan's place.'"

The session developed into a cross-fire of criticism of the mayor, but Hysan's case was referred to Corporation Counsel Bird Dolby with a request that he make a study of the case and report to the council.

A witness at the meeting was Alfred Hamburg, 3712 Twenty-fifth street, Mount Rainier, who received the ticket in controversy for allegedly failing to observe a stop sign. He said Hysan was not discourteous to him.

A few weeks ago, Hysan turned in his badge and other effects rather than "take care of" a ticket after Councilman Arthur J. Bates requested Mayor Pruitt to "talk with Hysan." The question before the meeting last night was whether Hysan could resign without the approval of the council and whether the mayor could force him to resign without the council's approval.

Alfred Knopf, Jr., Missing, Believed Seeking Film Job

Boston, Aug. 2 (AP).—An indication that 19-year-old Alfred A. Knopf, jr., missing son of a nationally-known New York book publisher, went to Hollywood to seek his fortune came tonight from his Norwood employer.

John L. Ladd, general manager of the Plimpton Press, in Norwood, announced the youth had written him last week.

"I am off on my own and you will not hear from me until I make good," the letter said.

Announcement of word from the boy came as police in eight States began a search for the freckle-faced, husky youth.

"Young Knopf quit his job July 26, saying he was going away," Ladd said tonight. "I notified his father, and his parents decided to wait a week before calling upon the police for aid.

"The boy has been disinterested in his apprentice work in the composing room of the press and decided to seek another future instead of following his father's profession. He is interested in the stage and movies. I believe he planned to go to Hollywood.

N. D. Governor Acts to Force Wheat Price Up

Langer Threatens to Have State's Bank Buy Entire Crop.

By the United Press.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 2.—A plan to force light wheat prices upward in North Dakota by State purchase of the grain was announced tonight by Gov. William Langer.

Gov. Langer, as chairman of the State Industrial Commission, said that effective tomorrow the State-owned mill and elevator at Grand Forks will offer to buy all light wheat, in carload lots only, produced in North Dakota this year, at prices topping those of leading markets.

Bank to Back Plan.

In a radio address, Langer charged that "grain gamblers have been robbing North Dakota farmers for years like vultures flying over a corpse."

Langer threatened to "buy every bushel of wheat raised in the State, paying the farmers cash, unless the market pays what the grain is worth."

He said the buying program will be backed by the State-controlled Bank of North Dakota at Bismarck, which has assets exceeding $30,000,000. The mill will purchase grain from farmers only, Langer said.

He declared that the State mill, built 15 years ago "for service to the people in emergency," will buy wheat from no other States.

Langer said the State commission has arranged additional storage space in Minneapolis and Duluth, Minn., mill bins.

Says Weight Dishonest.

The Governor cited as one of the reasons for his move the recent fluctuation of light wheat prices on the Minneapolis market. He said the price on July 22 was 89 cents a bushel, and four days later dropped to 30 cents.

He charged that grain markets are not giving farmers an "honest" bushel, since, he pointed out, it often takes two bushels of light wheat to make the 60-pound weight, basis of trade offerings.

Latest estimates show that between 150,000,000 and 180,000,000 bushels of spring hard wheat will be harvested in the Dakotas, Minnesota and part of Montana. Virtually all of the crop is extremely light except in the Red River Valley, along the eastern border of North Dakota. The highest weight wheat reported to date was 52 pounds to the bushel, with some "too poor to thresh."

Retired Engineer Dies Of Lockjaw in Hospital

Not considered serious, the wound was treated with home remedies and a physician was not called until his condition became critical. MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Involved in 'Bit of Trouble,' Suspended From Job, Man Is Heartbroken by Fiancee's Coolness.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I've heard of broken hearts but this is the first time I've had one. It's becoming unbearable. I am 28 years old and desperately in love with a girl of 20. We became engaged last Christmas, after a very beautiful summer. In June of this year I became involved in a bit of trouble and have been indefinitely suspended from my job until cleared. Having no other income, I earn what I can doing odd jobs. I was forced to turn in a new car I was buying, which had been our chief pleasure. None of my men friends ever offer us a ride, although they invite my fiancee out. For quite a while she rejected such invitations, but now she accepts. At first she tried to conceal the fact from me, but not any more.

• • • •

The engagement ring has been transferred to the right hand. I see her about once a week at which times she still acts as though I am the one-and-only. The group she associates with is a gin-drinking, pleasure-seeking bunch. She is losing weight and I think her health is suffering. I disapprove of much that she does but am powerless to prevent it, and deep in my heart I am sure she is doing nothing really wrong, though some people tell me I am a "blind fool."

• • • •

I cannot think of anything but her. At night I wonder where she is, with whom, what she is doing. I cannot see her often because I have no money to spend and cannot run around with the bunch. She went out with a friend of mine and he said she told him she didn't go with me often because I am broke. I do not think it fair of her to plan everything without me simply because I am without funds. Surely if she loved me she would stick by me until I get my job back, don't you think?

• • • •

My questions are: How can I win her back to her former self, away from these gin drinkers? What can I do to make her love me as much as I love her? How can I convince her there is something better in life than pleasure-seeking? Inasmuch as we were to have been married this fall, don't you think she should be encouraging me to save rather than tempting me to spend? I am miserable and lonely without her; it must be her or no one. My whole future, health, everything, depends on her. I can not forget her. I tried once and now I don't want to. I want her. Some day she will settle down to earth and when she does, I want to be near. What simple rules should a man follow in order to keep a woman in love with him? Yours,

HEARTBROKEN.

What to Believe.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: It is my opinion that women can be roughly divided into two classifications: the leaners, takers or clinging vines; and the creators, conservers or maternal types. The man who hopes to hold the love of the former type of woman has to be—or to give the impression of being—strong, self sufficient, self reliant, resourceful, entirely able to live without her. The latter type gives her love most generously to the man who needs her protection and care, or who creates the impression that he can not live without her; that he is helplessly dependent upon her for inspiration, consolation, support and guidance.

• • • •

This girl over whom you are breaking your heart may be the type who needs a strong man to lean on; while you may be the latter type of man, not sufficient unto yourself and not wise enough in the ways of women to play the strong-man role which alone would compel her whole hearted allegiance. It could be, of course, that she doesn't fit precisely into either category; that she falls somewhere in between; and that her fickle-seeming conduct is the result of social pressure, so to speak.

• • • •

Her heart and her head may be at war where you are concerned. She may still love you, in a purely emotional way, and at the same time fear that you could never make a dependable helpmeet. After all, it isn't very reassuring to have one's fiance "become involved" in trouble of a kind which so besmirches his good name that he is indefinitely suspended from his job. And it is entirely possible that her family and her most intimate friends are bringing under-cover pressure to bear on her to the end of breaking the engagement altogether. Older and presumably wiser heads may be telling her how foolish she would be to marry you at all, and may be insisting that the only expedient thing for her to do is to keep up her social contacts with other men, until you have proven yourself.

• • • •

Probably she doesn't know what she intends to do. She may be playing for time (both with you and with her family), hoping against hope that you will yet prove yourself to be the man she had thought you were when she fell in love with and promised to marry you—a man of honor, capable of discharging mature responsibilities in a socially acceptable way. In saying she doesn't see you often nowadays because you are "broke," she may have been indulging in a flippant deception in order to conceal from her pleasure-seeking associates tragic inner conflict and a heartbreak which matches your own, though stemming from a different source. If she were really as callous as her conduct superficially suggests, I think she would have broken off the engagement at once. The very fact that she is losing weight and anesthetizing herself, so to speak, with gin and incessant pleasure-seeking, suggests that she is the victim of unsolved emotional problems.

• • • •

Only by putting first things first can you hope to master this situation. You have no moral right to expect this girl, or any girl, to give you love and loyalty until you have proven yourself worthy of such devotion. Your first duty is to clear your name and re-establish yourself in a permanent, well-paying job. Indeed, until you have accomplished this much, you should voluntarily free the girl from the engagement, for you have no decent future prospects to offer her.

• • • •

In giving way to moon-calf heartbreak, you are showing yourself definitely less than a man, and consistently reducing your chances of getting back on your feet in the business world. If the girl's erstwhile love for you is dying by inches, as it seems to be, it is probably because your manhood is commensurately shrinking, and if she is recklessly playing with dubious associates, it is probably because your failure to measure up to what she thought you were has left her with a "So what?" attitude toward life in general.

• • • •

In other words, as I see it, this mess you are in is almost entirely of your own making and you've got to face this dismal truth and rectify it before you can lay claim to an adequate amount of enduring happiness. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Drying of Knitted Goods In Towel Saves Shape

When laundering sweaters or knitted suits be careful not to stretch them while wet or they will be too large when dried. Before washing, lay the garment on some light-colored paper and trace about it with a pencil. When it has been rinsed fit the garment into the tracing and lay paper and garment on a Turkish towel to dry. Drying may require two days, but the fitting will be correct.

Even Berets Show the Skyscraper Influence In New Millinery Inspired by Gay Nineties

Here is the Harryson version of the new sophisticated beret, as sponsored by Schiaparelli. This striking skyscraper model of brown felt has an insert of gold grosgrain ribbon at the crown edge for color contrast. The ever-popular beret has re-entered the fashion scene for fall, in a smartly sophisticated styling; it is no longer just a casual hat, but an important fall style.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

AT A RECENT showing in New York, of hats by Harryson, which are sold in Washington, there was a definite trend toward millinery inspired by the Gay Nineties and Empire periods. This reversion to the luxury eras was emphasized throughout the collection, in rich fabrics, jewel colors, luxurious trimming, and modernized period styling. Off-the-face lines, with a decided manipulation of the materials to give the effect of height, were outstanding features, whether the model happened to be a beret, toque, or brimmed affair.

Another important note in this interesting showing, was the absence of shallowness. Depth in the back of the hat is the substitution, not only for comfort, but to cut the extreme lines of exaggerated height. The turban was exploited in new versions showing Oriental influence in design; the beret in sophisticated styling with an upsweeping movement. The fabrics chosen were velvet, velour, felt and antelope; trimmings, ostrich feathers, jeweled ornaments, luxurious-looking flowers. Some of the hats flaunted dashing chin straps—an Empire inspiration.

For the ingenue, there were charming directoire bonnets, worn high over the forehead. For the older woman, hats from this same period, were fashioned with high cone-shaped crowns, set off by an ostrich plume trim. What was described as a perfect suit hat was a creation in black antelope, height achieved by a trick horn effect on top; strips of antelope in contrasting color furnished the striking trimming. High, draped crowns were featured in the casual type of felt for street wear. For the sophisticated costume, the new beret of skyrocketing height, worn off the face, was suggested as final word in millinery in this classification.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 2.

DID you ever meet a lady jailer? I hadn't either, personally or professionally, until the other day. I suppose I always imagined them big, stern, forbidding and inclined to wallop bad girls who wouldn't mind mama.

ALICE HUGHES.

But now I've met Ruth E. Collins, head of our 12-story Women's House of Detention, the most modern institution of its kind in the country. In spite of its delicate name, it's a jail all right, with 401 cells—most of them, alas, filled at all times with wayward sisters. For in a city of 7,000,000 there are bound to be a lot of ladies who step out of line socially, and a great many of them come under the watch and ward of Ruth Collins.

She's no horse-faced lady jailer of the films—this Ruth Collins—but a very feminine, soft-spoken and gentle woman, in spite of 25 years of trying social work. A Davenport, Iowa, girl, she went into it right after her graduation from the University of Wisconsin, and has commanded our bad girls since '31. Rehabilitation is her watchword and even fetish, and while she doesn't pamper the naughty inmates, she does temper justice with mercy, keeping up a heavy entertainment program to divert their minds from their troubles. And she lives right there in the jail-house! It's a 24-hour job in the big house in Greenwich Village—where there are hot and cold running water in every cell, and many of home's comforts (behind bars)!

Ruth Collins doesn't make much money, but she loves music, the theater and her job, and is a happy woman—one of those who are doing a lot to lighten the loads of the less fortunate. It's wonderful to meet such women, though they do make the rest of us feel pretty selfish. A lady jailer, too!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Fame often comes easily in this town, whose pet game has always been follow-the-leader. Its lightning has just struck the fine Italian skull of a local hair-architect named Saveli, ever since word got about that he is the regular thatch-moulder of Ethel duPont Roosevelt. See how easy it is? Make a prettier wave on the skull of a public figure, and all the girls will beat a path to your salon! . . .

• • • •

I suppose that any time now scores of our little girls will be practicing their horrid scales on exact copies of the tiny pianofore used by England's royal Shirley Temples, Lilybet and Maggie Rosie. A big piano shoppe here has the replicas in stock—white, small, but with a complete keyboard and with gold touches. And, of course, the practicing will sound just as terrible next door as it does at Windsor Castle! . . .

• • • •

Wife beaters, alas, still are all too common in this naughty world, but feminine man-beaters are not so often arrested by the constables. One was arrested here last week, though, on a complaint by a subway inspector who went to the hospital with a badly dented skull. He charged that Mrs. Rose Durtzel thumped him lustily over the head with an umbrella while he was on duty. Rose denies everything . . .

• • • •

Have no fear—Mickey Mouse is dandy for the kiddies! Our school supe. Dr. Harold Campbell, says so! In book form, Mickey has been placed on the recommended reading list for the youngsters of the town—so the world-beloved Disney animal is now in the same select company as the dynamic Dionnes and even Mother Goose! . . .

• • • •

Broadway rounders have now dug up the street's oldest night-club arteest. She is Ileana Thury, who performs at a Hungarian hot-spot with songs and dances—and is 70. Youth, to coin a phrase, will be served—and so, it seems, will Mama Ileana! . . .

• • • •

My, my, capes again! My chums, hurrying back from Paris with advance style tips, tell me breathlessly that these graceful garments have replaced coats and jackets in many of the early fall ensembles. Most of them are trimmed with slick flat furs, such as a set of leopard, say. Well, I've always said there is something dramatic and romantic about a cape—although we must dmit the darned things are pretty drafty in a high wind!

Men Urged to Boycott Girls Wearing High Heels

Girls who wear high heels at all times may find themselves out of the matrimonial running if the boycott stimulated by an association of chiropodists makes headway. Inspired by the movement among Chinese schoolboys who have pledged themselves not to marry girls with bound feet, the foot doctors are urging American youths to use similar tactics as a means of bringing their girl friends down to earth.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Dread Disease Nature.

The possibility of the discovery of a preventative for infantile paralysis, as announced yesterday in this column, has focused attention on the means by which that disease is spread.

Epidemics of infantile paralysis occur usually in the summer. In this it differs from other contagious diseases of the same sort which occur in winter, due to the great crowding together of people in schools, etc. Why infantile paralysis prefers the summer is unknown. The epidemics are seldom large and seldom widespread, usually being confined to one of two communities in a country, and running their course in a few weeks or months.

The cause is an ultramicroscopic virus which is one of the smallest organisms known. It has a strong affinity for nervous tissue, especially the cells of the central nervous system.

The virus enters the central nervous system by way of the nerve of smell in the nose. The olfactory nerve-ends spread out over the upper part of the nose, and the fibers of the nerve enter the skull at this point and lead directly to the central nervous tissue. Traveling along these nerves, for which the virus has an affinity, it makes its way to the cells governing the movements of muscles, destroying them and thus causing the paralysis.

That this is the method of invasion has been proved by sectioning the olfactory tracts on both sides in monkeys. In these animals virus instilled into the nose will not cause the disease.

This explains how the newest method of prevention works. A 1 per cent solution of zinc sulphate is sprayed into the nose exactly on the part where the olfactory nerve spreads out and apparently also has an affinity for nervous tissue, and after application kills the virus before it has a chance to creep up the nerves.

No success was ever obtained by the use of immune serum or vaccines in preventing infantile paralysis, either when given in the nose or any other way. This disappointment caused investigators to try other means of prevention.

In 1935 Armstrong and Harrison, of the National Institute of Health in Washington, reported that a solution of alum injected into the nose in monkeys prevented infection in a large number of cases when the virus was artificially instilled subsequently into the nose. Following their work a large series of experiments were done by Schultz and Gebhardt at Stanford University. They tried out 40 different chemicals, many of which had protective power, but none as effective as the zinc sulphate.

The solution must be applied directly to the olfactory membrane, and the technique of doing this is somewhat special. All nose specialists are trained to do it, and general practitioners can learn very easily. It seems certain that when the next epidemic of infantile paralysis arrives it will be employed widely, and all the children in the epidemic areas will have a nasal spray several times, so the training of technicians in all communities is advisable.

Advice Offered for Hosts and Guests on Rides and Trips.

By Margaret Wallace

AUTOMOBILE etiquette has an important place in the life of today. Many persons who are unfailingly well bred in their home become guilty of crudities of conduct in a motor car.

The guest in a motor car should be careful not to step in ahead of the host or hostess and preempt the best seat. While it is expected that the host or hostess will offer the choice seat to the guest, yet the guest should wait for directions as to seating. Guests also should be careful not to enter the cars carrying plants or other articles that will cause dirt or untidiness.

Neighbors of car owners should not be officious in entering cars or soliciting rides. Persons who would not think of entering a neighbor's home without permission, will step into a neighbor's motor car and even ask to be driven certain places.

The question of just who should ride in the rumble seat is a matter which has to be decided on the basis of convenience and consideration of the ages of the passengers. Even the wife of the owner of the car should not be expected to give up her seat in the car and ride in a rumble seat when there are younger people among the passengers. If the passengers are about the same age it is usual for the wife of the owner of the car as hostess to ride in the rumble seat and give the choice seats to her guests. If the wife of the owner drives the car then the owner as host rides in the rumble seat. Of course common sense and respect for age demands that elderly people are not asked to ride in rumble seats unless it is absolutely necessary.

Those who accept invitations for motor trips in other persons' cars should make careful inquiries as to just how many and how large pieces of luggage they are expected to bring. They should keep strictly to instructions in this regard. If necessary they can send extra bags by express or parcel post.

While it is not polite for guests to be constantly offering to pay for gas or oil at every gas station, yet because of the high cost of motor trips, it is not unusual for friends to agree to pay their share of a trip. This arrangement should be made before the trip begins and the guests' share of expenses paid in private during or at the end of the trip. Nothing is so unattractive as to see a motor owner and guests arguing at a gas station about who shall have the privilege of paying while the other guests, the station attendants and the public look on.

Photograph for Fun

YOU LIKE to snap your family, friends, places you've been.

But photography can be more than keeping a record. Make your pictures striking, artistic, full of human interest. A few pointers:

1. Diagonal lines give a sense of motion and drama.

2. Take the children — not squinting into the sun — but busily making mud pies, with the sun at the side for good lighting.

3. "Frame" your outdoor scenes. That is, "shoot" a river boat from an opening between trees. They'll outline the view, give the effect of distance.

4. For lovely cloud effects, cut the usual landscape exposure to a half or a quarter. Or keep skies from being white, overexposed blanks by fitting a sky-filter—half yellow, half white—over your lens, with yellow portion covering the sky.

5. Avoid taking self-conscious people stiffy standing in rows. Instead of posing mother side by side with brother home from college, snap them as mother all aglow greets him at the train.

Our new 40-page booklet, Successful Amateur Photography, gives diagrams and photographs illustrating these and other pointers for beginners and advanced amateurs. Take successful vacation snaps, in or out of doors. Child portraits. Winning prize contests.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Successful Amateur Photography," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HENRY AND JANE built them a house in the middle of the woods, quite a way from the important part of town, but they wanted trees and seclusion. It was a little ready-built house—not pretentious, but it turned out to be so comfortable and pleasant.

They're neither one of them gardeners, but they've had a great time telling each other how to do. At least, Henry says Jane tells him and he does the work. Henry showed us where he is going to have his rock garden when he gets around to it, and Jane pointed to where she is going to have a herb garden and the children led us to the bird's nests.

Any way, they had a delicious party in their yard the other night that convinced us that we simply couldn't live another summer without an outdoor fireplace and grill. Because they roasted the grandest leg of lamb we ever tasted. Served it with mint sauce, hot buttered rolls, macaroni and cheese and a mixed green salad and beer.

A rustic homemade table stood near the outdoor stone grill to hold the kitchen things, then up a gentle slope was another rustic table with a Swedish peasant cloth on it and pleasantly bright pottery plates, blue mugs and big colored pottery bowls for serving the various odds and ends. Some inexpensive but comfortable deck chairs lingered leisurely about, while a little low table with little low chairs made a place for the children nearby. A small brook trickled romantically along the back of their lot and very tall oak trees closed in all about the place.

Altogether, we had a lovely visit and decided that a family group sitting on a lawn or a pleasant porch of a summer's evening is just about the happiest, most satisfying experience in life. And we've honeymooned in Venice and ridden in a droshky to the Red Square in Mascow!

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's bulletin "Sew Yourself a Family History"—it tells how to record some of the pleasant memories that you cherish.

Diplomat From Turkey Gets Orders to Return

Ibrahim Seyfullah, Second Secretary of Embassy, Will Sail This Month for New Post in Foreign Office at Home.

If diplomats keep on being transferred at the rate they have been moved around this summer since Ambassador Bonnet was called back to France to a new post, there will not be a familiar face among the members of the diplomatic corps.

The latest to receive his moving orders is Ibrahim Seyfullah, for four years Second Secretary of the Turkish Embassy. He will start packing very shortly preparatory to sailing sometime this month for his romantic home on the Bosphorus, and there will assume his new duties at the Turkish Foreign Office.

While he has been in Washington, the Turkish secretary has made numerous friends. His social activities were curtailed to some degree after the tragic automobile accident in which he figured, several years ago, when the car in which he was riding with Mrs. Harold Ickes, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and Mrs. John (Genevieve Forbes) Herrick in New Mexico turned over. The accident was fatal to Mrs. Ickes and Mrs. Herrick was so seriously injured that she was forced to remain in bed almost a year. Seyfullah also suffered painful injuries.

Since the Ataturk regime in Turkey, there are now, of course, two kinds of leading families, the old and the new. Seyfullah belongs to one of the most distinguished of the older, and has been in the diplomatic service for a number of years. He speaks English, has studied in Paris, and has served in Germany as well as this country. He owns a beautiful home in the Turkish capital, with handsome painted ceilings and an attractive garden.

While speaking of an Oriental subject, Washington friends of Prince Burhan-Eddine, heir presumptive to the former throne of the Ottoman Empire, were startled to hear that his Bar Harbor home was looted recently of valuable possessions. According to the local police chief, George C. Abbott, only "several hundred dollars' worth of jewels" were stolen, but young Prince Osman, son of Prince Burhan, said not jewels, but "objects of great value" were missing.

Prince Burhan, who is the son of the late Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey, was married in London in 1932 to the former Mrs. Deming Jarvis, of Washington. His son, Prince Osman, spent last winter in the Capital and was frequently seen with members of the debutante set.

LANGUAGES, with the exception of French, are being relegated to the background while economics comes to the fore in popularity as a college subject, says Dr. Esther J. Crooks, who has been a teacher of Spanish for a decade at Goucher College and Johns Hopkins Teachers College in Baltimore. Every spring she brings her Spanish Club to Washington to visit the Library of Congress, the Pan-American Union and usually, as a climax of the day, to be entertained at one of the Latin American embassies or legations.

Just now Dr. Crooks is preparing to go to Mexico City as one of the three official delegates of the United States to the Third Inter-American Conference on Education. She was here yesterday for a conference at the headquarters of the People's Mandate Committee (which has nothing to do with her going to the educational conference except that her interest in peace education will be expressed in her paper before the convention, "Educacion para la Paz").

In addition to being one of the delegates from this Government, she will also represent the American Council on Education. The United States delegation is headed by Mrs. Katherine M. Cook, chief of the division of special problems of the office of education of the Department of Interior, and Dr. Willard W. Beatty, director of education in the office of Indian affairs of the Interior Department, is the third member.

AND NOW BACK to the matter of turning from languages to economics, Dr. Crooks says it's quite a natural reaction. Economics is foremost in the world picture at present. Moreover, many young people who were encouraged a few years ago to prepare themselves for positions as secretaries to firms doing business in South America have found that employers preferred South American-born men who could speak a little English and knew all about his own country to a bright young North American who had high hopes and big ideas and a little knowledge of Spanish, but none of the country with which he was to deal.

Therefore, despite the growing unity and increasing co-operation among the nations of the Western Hemisphere, the study of Spanish in our schools is decreasing. However, Dr. Crooks says, that is not an indication that interest in the Latin-American countries is less among the students in college here. They are more keenly interested than ever before, she believes.

She assisted in initiating in Latin America the signing of the People's Mandate to Governments to End War and, in collaboration with the central office of the Mandate Committee here, and her colleague in Goucher College, Senorita Eudofilia Arboleda, of Quito, Ecuador, she sent to all the Latin-American countries copies of the Mandate in Spanish and French. She has long been interested in the peace movement and is regional director of the Middle Atlantic States for the United States section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and chairman of the committee on education for the Maryland branch of the league. She is also a member of the Maryland Committee of the Emergency Peace Campaign and belongs to the Washington Institute de las Espanas.

LATIN-AMERICAN countries are making an effort to promote peace through education, says Dr. Crooks. In Mexico a bulletin was published by the government last October, setting forth its plans for such education in its schools. In both Brazil and Argentina there is instruction in the the schools designed to promote international understanding among the students and several of the South American countries have eliminated from their history textbooks material which was found to create prejudice in the minds of youth against a neighboring country. One of the subjects for discussion at the coming conference, incidentally, may be the possibility of having standard textbooks in history and geography for all of the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

MRS. CONCHA ROMERA JAMES, chief of the division of intellectual co-operation of the Pan American Union, with which she has been connected for the past eight years, will not only be its official delegate to the conference but also is a member of the organizing committee for the gathering, and sailed last week to arrive there early.

She was born in Mexico and received her early training there. Later she attended Pomona College, in California, and Columbia University, in New York. She has since spent much time doing research work in Mexico and Chile on the educational movement among women. She is an officer of the Instituto de las Espanas, of Washington, and also a member of the People's Mandate Committee for the Western Hemisphere

Create Own Work, Vocational Expert Tells Woman of 40

Miss Frances Maule, noted authority on women's occupational problems, who was one of the speakers before the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, gave the following advice to women over 40 who are suddenly thrown on their own resources:

1. Seek to establish yourself in a business of your own, instead of hunting a job which you may never land.
2. Capitalize on your existing skills rather than spend time and money acquiring new ones.
3. Steer away from the more crowded competitive fields.
4. Concentrate your efforts on the so-called women's fields—food, shelter, clothing, child care, etc.
5. Concentrate on fields where maturity is an asset, rather than a liability.
6. Face your situation realistically; accept the business world on its own terms.

Old-Fashioned Picnic Enjoyed by 73d Club

Yesterday Too Warm for Country Trip, So Members Have Their Party at Wardman Park Here.

ALL THE ELEMENTS of a big, old-fashioned picnic, excepting size, were included yesterday in the small but jolly party of the Seventy-third Club, at the Wardman Park Hotel. Members of the club who are still in Washington, standing by and hoping for the adjournment of Congress, are making the best of a summer in the Capital.

Yesterday Mrs. James Meeks, of Illinois, was hostess to the group at an all-day picnic. It was planned as an outing such as might be arranged for an old settlers' reunion or a political rally, with everything except the number attending to complete it. The club members had decided it was too warm to drive into the country for the day and wanted to prove they could stage just as good a picnic in Washington.

The picnic luncheon was served on the balcony of Mrs. Meeks' apartment with Mrs. John M. O'Connell, of Rhode Island as cohostess. The guests then went down to the hotel tennis courts, where some enjoyed tennis while others played bridge at tables under the trees nearby. There were also contests of the "old-fashioned picnic" variety. A peanut race was one of the features and a long-story contest another. Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, of Ohio, was conceded the champion story-teller almost before the contest was fairly under way.

Later in the afternoon, just before the party broke up, some of the guests went for a swim in the Wardman pool.

Yesterday's party was such a success another is to be given next Monday. Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wife of Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota, invited the club to her home, 3125 Ellicott street, for a similar picnic, with croquet and horseshoe pitching promised among the sports on the program.

The Seventy-third Club, composed of wives of members of the House and Senate who came in with the Seventy-third Congress, is known as one of the most congenial of the Congressional groups, a club which has a party whenever there is the least provocation for it.

Among those present yesterday in addition to the hostesses were Mrs. Lundeen, Mrs. John A. Martin, of Colorado; Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Herman P. Kopplemann, of Connecticut; Mrs. R. L. Ramsay, of West Virginia; Mrs. Ernest Randolph, of West Virginia; Mrs. Edward Eicher, of Iowa; Mrs. J. Buell Snyder, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Mark Wilcox, of Florida, and Mrs. Martin Smith, of Washington. Miss Ida Meeks, of San Diego, Calif., was a guest.

Men Are Best Cooks, Say 2 Author-Chefs

Are men better cooks than women? John Kenny and Achmed Abdullah, collaborating on a new cook book for men, state emphatically that masculine cookery is superior. They admit that most women have a larger repertoire of recipes, but claim that feminine cooking lacks flavor and seasoning. They believe that women spend too much time making food look pretty and not enough making it taste good.

City Club Plans Dinner.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley will act as hostess Thursday evening at the get-together dinner of the Women's City Club, of which she is president. The dinner will be in the coffee room of the clubhouse.

Miss Elizabeth Barnes Starts on Western Trip

* XX WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1937 13

Bob Burns Says:

Book learning is a mighty handy thing to give you a foundation but before you're able to cope with the hard knocks of life, you have'ta get the practical experience because things are always coming up that are not taught in books.

My cousin was madly in love with a girl down home but he didn't know how to propose to her, so finally one day a friend of his gave him a book on how to win a wife. My cousin studied the book, word for word, and one night he invited his girl on a moonlight buggy ride. The next morning, his friend met him on the street and my cousin said, "Well, I proposed last night and that durn book didn't do me a bit of good!"

The friend says, "Well, don't feel so bad about it—remember that very often when a girl says 'No' she really means 'Yes.'" My cousin says, "Well, that's just the trouble—when I asked her to marry me, she didn't say 'No'—she said 'Rats!'"

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Goldschmidt's Speech

Believing that a "total misunderstanding" of the U. F. W. A.'s position on strikes and picketing by Government employes resulted from the address of Arthur Goldschmidt at a recent meeting of the Washington committee of the American Civil Liberties Union, Jacob Baker has asked this column to assist in setting the record straight.

Goldschmidt, it was affirmed, "clearly stated the position of the United Federal Workers of America as one opposed to strikes and picketing." There was a general expression of opinion from others after Goldschmidt had spoken. Goldschmidt is vice president of the U. F. W. A.

The classic but somehow personality-less walls of the Interior Building will carry the vibrations of a heap of old-fashioned ha-cha the night of August 11. Also, there will be a heap of new-fashioned ha-cha. And a big crowd of Government folks will make it.

The party is arranged by the new and active Interior Department Recreation Association as its coming-out event. The group will enliven the evening with two kinds of dancing, the Virginia reel and the hop-skips of the day. Two orchestras will play alternately. And sandwiched between will be a showing of the talent in the department.

The committee on arrangements is wisely giving time for rehearsals of the older dances. You can't just prance on the floor and do a Virginia reel or the Sir Roger de Coverly and catch the fine technique by the time the first round of fiddles is quiet. There is a technique to that form of dancing, and it was lost just about the time that people lost the finer grasps on how to enter and leave buggies gracefully and the other grasps they had in the more graceful age.

Things we approve of: The way those pleasant young ladies in Michael Straus' press relations section beautify their desks with flowers most every day.

Explanation of the recent black eye and busted lip on big Tom Hampton, of the Bureau of Indian Affairs: It resulted from a hard-batted ball. Hampton, who belongs to the Shawnee tribe in Oklahoma, is something of a vocalist along with his athletic prowess.

Evelyn Adams, of the General Land Office, asks the local scribes please to refer to her (when occasion requires) as "Miss" instead of "Mrs." The former would certainly be the correct way of putting it, she points out.

Alois Holderith, a gardener in the Weather Bureau with 30 years and 6 months of service to his credit, was retired by reason of age on July 31.

The Democratic Women's National Council and their friends will go on a moonlight excursion down the Potomac tomorrow evening. The steamship Potomac will be used. The event takes the place of the picnic given each August "and gives promise of being a delightful occasion," its sponsors say. Mrs. Harry H. Dodderidge is president of the council. She will entertain at a party before the sailing.

Old Chain Bridge Demolition Lamented by Its Neighbors in Virginia; Son of First Keeper Recalls Experiences of His Father During Service

Historic Span Makes Way for Modern Structure on River.

Attacked already by the steam shovel, the carpenter's saw, and the steel worker's hammer old Chain Bridge will soon be but a memory. In a month it will be closed to traffic, and early next year a broad, modern bridge will span the Potomac and the C. and O. Canal.

But it's going to live in the minds of the nearby Virginia residents, some of whom have grown up with the old bridge. Rich in such memories is Joseph B. Merritt who has lived in the shadow of the bridge all his life, and whose father was its first keeper.

Merritt, who is almost 72, but has all the vigor of a man 35, likes to browse about the bridge, and talk about the old days to his friends. Foremost in his conversation, naturally enough, is his father. His father, Joseph B. Merritt, sr., was 21 when he enlisted in the Mexican War and by the time of the Civil War had attained the rank of cavalry captain. He fought all through both conflicts. In 1874 Chain Bridge was built, replacing an old wooden affair, and Joe Merritt went to work as head keeper.

He earned $125 per month, a very good figure for that time, but he really had to work for it. Twice a week came "drove day," and therein lay Joe Merritt's greatest headache. On those days all the farmers from deep in the valleys of Virginia converged on Chain Bridge with hundreds of cattle to sell the butchers of Washington. A short distance down Canal road from the bridge was located Drove's Rest, the stockyard which furnished the greater part of the city's beef. Merritt's troubles were caused by the fact that Chain Bridge could only stand the weight of 20 cattle at a time, so he had to stand at the Virginia end and separate them into droves of 20 as they came.

The cattle were exceptionally heavy when they reached the bridge, because it was the custom to stop at Pimmet's Run—a little creek close to the Virginia side of the Potomac—and "water" them, a practice which still holds today.

Between drove days the keeper could rest, for then there was not the problem of speeding automobiles and bridge-breaking trucks. There were drownings, though, for the swimmers 'way back in those days were caught by the swift currents in the vicinity of the bridge, even as they are now. From four to seven drownings occur there each year.

What does Merritt's son think of the bridge being torn down? "Well," he said, "of course there is a lot of sentiment attached to that bridge. But there are other reasons, too, why I am sorry to see it go. You see I own some real estate (old Fort Ethan Allen above the bride, which he inherited from his father), and I'd like to sell it. It'll be a time before traffic is running again, and, well, I'm gettin' to be an old man, you know, and I don't know whether I can last through another winter. I wanted to go to Florida this winter."

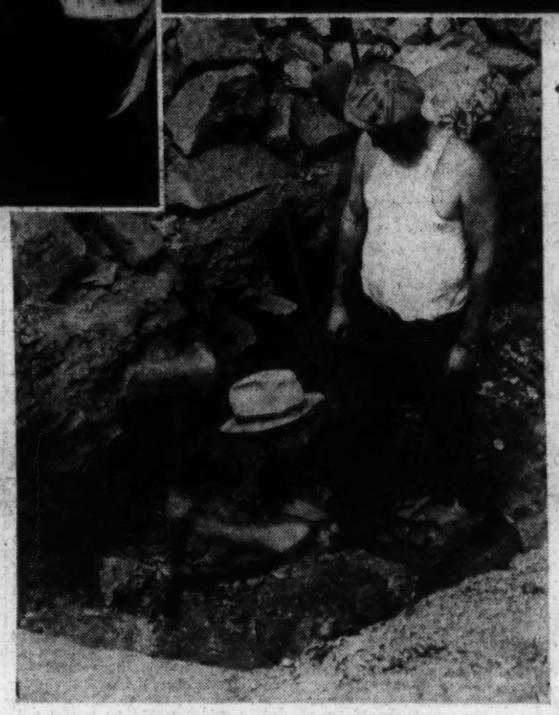

Post Staff Photos.

To Joseph B. Merritt, demolition of Chain Bridge will be like cutting down the apple tree in the back yard to make way for a garage. He's lived 71 years in its shadow.

Madeline Mertz sits on the Virginia shore and looks long at the old span as though to weld forever into her past the memory of its narrow roadway and towering masonry.

The job of replacing Chain Bridge with a modern one began yesterday. The bridge will be closed to traffic in a month and in not many more months the span will go the way of the wooden affair it replaced in 1874.

D. C. Tax Bill Assured Action In House Today

Bankhead Says Nothing Will Be Allowed to Sidetrack It.

The way has been cleared in the House today for consideration of the District tax bill, Speaker Bankhead gave assurances yesterday that nothing would be allowed to sidetrack it.

The Speaker, however, would make no predictions as to what will be done about the Tydings "retail price-fixing" rider to the bill, an addition that has nothing to do with local revenues.

President Roosevelt is opposed to the Tydings rider, and it is assumed that House leaders will, in one way or another, attempt to have the bill sent back to conference with a demand that the two be severed.

They want a separate vote on the Tydings rider. Whatever happens, the net result probably will be a delay in getting the tax bill on the statute books.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, yesterday filed the conference report on the tax bill, but under the rules it had to lie over 24 hours before it could be considered.

Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, said he would call up the report in the Senate as soon as the House has acted.

The bill, which has been buffeted around Capitol Hill since March, is designed to raise an additional $9,000,000. Its highlights are:

An increase in the real estate tax of from $1.50 on every $100 of assessed valuation to $1.75; the same increase on tangible personal property; a two-fifths of 1 per cent tax on gross business receipts; a new weight tax on automobiles, and a higher rate on net premiums of insurance companies.

Letter on Bridge Starts Hunt for Body of Suicide

"I, Charles Boyd, of 3100 Connecticut avenue, jumped off this bridge at 8:45. The one thing I wanted in life I could not have. This is the end."

This note, found last night by William Larkins, of 326 Eighth street northeast, as he walked along the north end of the Highway Bridge, set police to dragging the shallow waters of the Potomac River shoreline.

Police said the water was scarcely deep enough at this point for a man to drown, but opined the fall from the bridge might prove fatal. They said Boyd is 18 years old and the brother of Ned Boyd, Washington real estate man of the Connecticut avenue address.

A blue fountain pen was laid over the note to keep it from blowinw away, but there was no clothing found nearby, as is usual in bridge leaps and the police failed to recover the body.

Ned Boyd told police, they said, that his brother had come to visit him for a few days from Portsmouth, Va., and that yesterday he seemed despondent but he was unable to understand why.

Those exonerated by the Grnd Jury were: Edwin Poole, James W. Marceron, Joseph R. Gordon (two cases), and Kack DeWitt Futch.

Correct Way to Pick Up a Lady Taught Dancing Masters Here

Anyone who remembers squeezing his feet into dancing shoes and his hands into white gloves and being hurried off to dancing class by a misguided mother who didn't understand what torture she was subjecting him to should have been in the ballroom of the Hotel Mayflower last night.

He would have been well repaid for his agony by the sight of several hundred dancing teachers getting a taste of their own medicine.

The Dancing Masters of America opened their annual convention by attending a class in the tango, with Fred LeQuorne, of New York City, as teacher. And though they might be dictators of the ballroom back home in Milwaukee, they were just Teacher LeQuorne's stooges last night.

When he said "One-two-three-turn," they meekly one-two-three-turned—some in one direction and some in another. They promenaded for him and formed circles for him. In fact, the spectators wouldn't have been a bit surprised if they had gone into a Paul Jones.

The "one-two-three" formula was only the beginning. LeQuorne's tango was of the exhibition type, which means that in the course of it the gentleman lifts the lady from the floor and whirls her around.

The instructor explained that there is a wrong way and a right way to pick up a lady. The wrong way is to clutch her ribs. That is wrong because it usually results in broken bones.

The right way is to place one hand on her diaphragm and to use the other hand as a platform on which she can lean as she ascends.

These instructions proved more difficut than they sounded. Also, some of the dancing mistresses were not so svelte as the one LeQuorne chose as his partner in demonstrating the feat. The result was that the Mayflower ballroom resounded with dull thuds for a while as the teacher-pupils wrestled with their new terpsichorean problem.

Before the evening was over LeQuorne had produced a lot of tired but accomplished tango artists. It was the first of a week-long series of classes, at the end of which the dancing teachers will go home with a new set of tortures to inflict on young America.

Dog Owners Storm Tax Office In Last-Minute Rush for Tags

The office of the collector of taxes was crowded throughout yesterday, the announced deadline for the purchase of 1937 dog taxes, by eager owners of animals. C. M. Towers, collector of taxes, said 2,000 dogs in the District of Columbia are without tags.

The dog pound employes have been instructed, Towers explained, to pick up any dog without a license, and it will cost $4 to redeem the pet. Of this amount $2 is the pound tax and the other $2 will pay for the tag. If an owner fails to provide his dog with a tag before the end of August, a warrant for his arrest will be issued by the Police Department.

For the fiscal year ended July 31, 1936, there were 13,905 tags sold for a total of $27,810, and for the same period this year the number of dogs with licenses is 12,070, with revenue amounting to $24,140.

"People don't have to come to the District Building to pay the tax," Towers said. "If they will send $2 with a description of their dogs and a self-addressed envelope, we'll mail them the tag."

While the excitement of the last-minute taxpayers was in progress the annual dog hunt by the poundmasters was begun.

And, alas, poor Foxie. Foxie, who is owned by Poundmaster Frank Mark, had wandered away from his home several night ago, and yesterday Foxie was snatched by Mr. Mark's workmen.

It was learned that President Roosevelt has no dog of his own this year. However, licenses Nos. 1 and 2 were issued to a Boston bull, named Pooch, and a German boxer, tagged Heine, both owned by Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary. A cocker spaniel, Penny, who possesses tag No. 3, is owned by Mrs. Frederick Hayes Warren, daughter of another of the President's secretaries, Marvin H. McIntyre.

Children will produce a marionette version of "Hansel and Gretel" tomorrow at Chevy Chase Playground, Forty-first and Livingston streets northwest.

Foes of Abattoir Have a Weapon In Collins Bill

Measure Would Limit Industries' Use of Sewage Plant.

The District Commissioners yesterday were given another weapon to use in their fight against the construction of an abattoir at Benning.

Representative Ross Collins (Democrat) of Mississippi, chairman of the District subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, introduced a bill to limit the amount of waste that might flow from an industrial plant into the District's sewage disposal plant.

Ickes Suggested Point.

Collins' bill apparently was inspired by a letter sent last week to the Commissioners by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who pointed out that the sewage disposal plant here is not equipped to handle waste from the proposed slaughter house at Benning.

Ickes has been the spearhead in the fight to prevent Adolph Gobel & Co., from constructing a new abattoir at Benning.

Under the Collins bill, it would be unlawful for an industrial firm to discharge into the sewerage system any waste matter in excess of 30,000,000 gallons a year.

Exception Is Provided.

The bill says that should 150,000 gallons of waste be carried to the disposal plant daily for 10 days, that would be prima facie evidence in court that the annual discharge is in excess of 30,000,000 gallons.

The Commissioners, in "the interests of public health and safety," would have authority to allow a discharge of more than 30,000,000 "upon reasonable terms and conditions," including payment of compensation to the District for conveying, pumping, treating and disposal of the waste materials.

U. S. Air Lines Carried 110,842 Persons in July

The 20 scheduled air lines operating within the United States last month carried 110,842 passengers, and flew 5,811,404 miles, the Bureau of Air Commerce announced last night.

The commercial air lines carried 650,709 pounds of express, bureau officials said.

$1,735 Jewel Robbery Heads Crime Series

Stolen From D. C. Home; Other Thefts Net More Than $500.

A $1,735 jewel robbery headed a list of housebreakings and larcenies reported to police yesterday as Washington's latest crime outbreak continued despite a police round-up of underworld characters.

The jewel robbery was reported by Mrs. Helen MacGregor, of 2914 Twenty-ninth street northwest. Mrs. MacGregor, wife of Lieut. Col. Stephen H. MacGregor, told detectives that the gems were taken from her home some time during the past six weeks.

Other housebreakings reported netted robbers well over $500 worth of clothing, money and jewelry.

Thieves entered the Garden T Shoppe, 1835 Columbia road northwest, where Lizzie S. Jaynes, cashier, was shot to death six years ago, and left with a heavy safe containing a small amount of money and jewelry of undetermined value.

The theft was discovered by Grace Carl, manager of the shop, when she reported for work. She told police the burglars entered by breaking the glass in the rear door and apparently loaded the large strong box onto a truck. Vacant houses and garages are being searched for the safe.

Robert O. Tipton, 3547 Holmead place northwest, reported his automobile door was forced and a diamond ring worth $100 stolen from the car.

Electric motors worth $45 were stolen from a garage at 234 Third street northwest, James Sacchino, 210 C street northwest, reported.

In a before-dawn drive yesterday detectives led by Lieut. John H. Fowler, visited fiophouses and cheap rooming houses throughout the city. 39 suspects were taken to Police Headquarters where all but 18 were released. Those held will be paraded in a line-up tonight. The men were held only for investigation.

Accidental Shot Is Fatal.

Stuart, Va., Aug. 2. (AP).—Sheriff F. D. Mays said Sidney Bryant, 20, was killed instantly Sunday when a pistol which he was holding was accidentally discharged.

Americans Fighting in Spain Never Retreat, Doctor Says Here

This is Madrid. Blood has been spilled here. Just a few moments ago there was life; now there is death. It came from the skies. Why it came is not for you to answer. You are a doctor. There is work for you to do. And you are thankful. For, from the heart of Spain there is blood—blood to renew life.

In tones such as these a quiet, soft-spoken surgeon, Dr. Edward Barsky, organizer of the first American medical unit to succor war-torn loyalist Spain, last night gave a noncombatant's viewpoint of the hell-on-earth behind blood-spattered fighting lines.

Dr. Barsky, a surgeon on leave from Beth Israel Hospital, New York City, left Spain July 1 after seven shell-shattered months spent in the shambles of the Madrid front.

"Words, columns have been written about the high morale of the Madrilenos," he said. "You have been told of their phlegmatism in the face of intensive shell fire. Yet few have written about the high sacrifice behind the lines—the quiet, uncomplaining sacrifice of men and women who give their blood."

Yet more than blood is needed. There are doctors, ambulance units, tons of equipment, but not enough to care for the awful daily toll of badly wounded and dying.

What of gas cases, the doctor was asked.

"No gas has been used yet," he answered. "That is because gas is not expedient. The Fascists would use it if it aided them. After all they care little for our Red Cross insignias. But if they use gas, advance is held up from seven to ten days, due to the fact that gas hugs the terrain. In addition, gas is of little worth in a mountainous land."

What of the American units, the doctor was queried.

"They have stood the test," he said. "They have passed their Ithuriel's hour. Raw, hurriedly trained as many of them were, they are the shock troops, and have never been known to retreat."

"American or Spanish soldier," he continued, "all have been an inspiration to us in our work. And it is that spirit, that do-or-die determination that will make the Spanish capital the eternal tomb of Fascism."

Dr. Barsky, who will return shortly to Spain, was introduced at the meeting at the Shoreham to a group of Senators, Representatives and prominent Washingtonians by Congressman Jerry O'Connell of Montana. A film, "Heart of Spain," depicting behind-the-line scenes of war's horrors was shown. Two of the guests fainted, while a third became so ill he was escorted from the room.

4 Locations Studied for Navy Hospital

Naval Affairs Chairman Favors Site at Fort Davis.

Four sites for the new Naval Hospital are under consideration at the present time, according to Senaor David I. Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

After a call at the White House yesterday, Senator Walsh indicated that President Roosevelt had shown considerable interest in the question. He suggested that Senator Walsh and Representative Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee, visit the proposed locations immediately.

The sites which are receiving attention are: The tract at the end of Pennsylvania southeast, known as Fort Davis; a site on the Foxhall road, overlooking the Potomac River; Friendship, the McLean estate on Wisconsin avenue, and a location near Walter Reed Hospital.

Legislation has already been enacted for the construction of new hospital facilities on the site of the present medical center at a cost of $4,800,000, Senator Walsh stated, pointing out that this will have to be amended to allow the expenditure of the same amount at another location.

Senator Walsh said the Fort Davis and Foxhall road sites were receiving the most favorable consideration of the Naval Affairs Committee. He also stated that he favored the Fort Davis site. This location, he declared, is on the top of a hill near the 300-acre Fort Dupont Park, now under constrction by the Park and Plan-construction by the Par kand Planning Commission. The new park, which would either surround the new hospital or be adjacent to it, Senator Walsh said, would add greatly to the attractiveness of the grounds. He also pointed out that a fine view of the city and the Virginia hills could be obtained.

Both the Foxhall road location and the McLean estate have some favorable features, but are "far too expensive," Senator Walsh said. He stated that he had not visited the proposed location near Walter Reed, and therefore could give no opinion.

Senator Walsh declared that he hoped to be able to inform the President in a few days that some agreement had been reached on the location of the proposed medical center.

Arsonist-Robber Sets Home Afire After Looting It

Washington's latest police problem is a burglar who combines house breaking with arson, it developed last night with the simultaneous discovery of a burglary, and two fires in separated parts of the home of Mrs. Lillie Beard, a widow, of 2137 I street northwest.

Fire started at the same time in the pantry on the first floor of the Beard home and in the bathroom on the second floor on the other side of the house.

Mrs. Beard and her nurse, Sarah Rank were at the movies and neighbors called the fire department.

Firemen quickly extinguished the flames, but found the house had been ransacked and the front door left open. Dresser drawers were opened and their contents strewn about the place.

Mrs. Beard told police between $200 and $300 was stolen.

Exercises Close Vacation School

Some 125 children, members of Holy Comforter parish, celebrated the closing of their vacation school last night with exercises at the school hall.

The exercises included skits, recitations and a mock trial. Joseph Eckert, of St. Mary's Seminary at Baltimore, has been director of the school and was master-of-ceremonies at the exercises last night.

The vacation school at Holy Comforter is one of nine that have been in operation in Catholic parishes throughout the city, sponsored by the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine.

Gotham Scoffs At Lily-White Burlesk Shows

Demise of the Strip-Tease Seems to Sound Knell of 'Arty' Burleycue.

New York, Aug. 2.—This will assure the out-of-town customers that the strip act is really dead.

And the burlesque business seems to be dying. The patrons don't like the new state of affairs.

On 125th street, in the Negro belt, along the tinsled stem called Broadway and on Forty-second street, west of Times Square, the citizens who used to push an unending stream of half dollars across cashiers' counters to see disrobing to music have abandoned the strip palaces.

Everything is clean now. The city said it had to be and burlesque went moral. It put on more clothes and got out in front of the footlights and wisecracked. Burlesque still has its nakedness but the strip is gone.

The casts tried hard. The managements dressed the girls nicely. The management had been called down to the license commissioner's office a few weeks before to be told that stripping was out.

The refurbished acts made sly remarks about erasure of the human curve and the ladies of the chorus danced, instead of walked, through their routines. They really had something. It was good to look at. But that flow of 50-cent pieces out in the box office slackened. The customers didn't like it.

Houses Still Closing.

Week before last, a burlesque house closed. Last week another one closed. This week the management of one on Forty-second street talked about moving further uptown, in the Fifties, and boosting the top on the pasteboards to $1.65.

"Look," expostulated one of the entrepreneurs of burlesque's new version, "my pay roll is $5,700 a week; my rent is $1,500; I'm crossing something over $5,000. That leaves me $2,000 in the red. At the end of a year I'll be bankrupt for $10,000. Not bad, eh?"

In front of his footlights Ann Corio, who was teasing before Gypsy Roose Lee ever heard about the dresses with the trick snaps, comes out of the wing wearing a padlock.

"I would if I could, but I can't," she sings to the front row.

Applause is scattered.

She changes costumes. Now she is in widows' weeds.

"Mr. Striptease is dead," she moans.

"Because of Mr. LaGuardia, I must be on my guardia," says Ann of the mayor, a catch in her voice.

Behind her the ladies of the ensemble prance in costumes reminiscent of the gay nineties. Red garters, sheer hose, fluffy understaings. But no stripping.

The comedians come on. They unloose a double-meaning wisecrack. A stage cop pounces from the wings.

"That's out!" he yells.

The audience is quiet, deadpanned.

Joan Fontaine New Lead for Astaire

Joan Fontaine, who has made a surprising journey toward stardom in recent months, has won the coveted role of leading lady to Fred Astaire in the latter's first solo starring picture, "A Damsel in Distress," which has just gone before cameras. George Stevens is directing the production, which will also feature George Burns, Gracie Allen and Ray Noble.

Although she made her screen debut less than a year ago, and has appeared in only four films, Miss Fontaine has played opposite John Beal, Preston Foster and Nino Martini in three successive pictures.

Nino Martini Asked For Picture Encore

Rarely does a singer encore a song for motion pictures. In "Music for Madame," however, Nino Martini, world-famous tenor, again sings for the screen the aria from Pagliacci, "Vesti la Guibba."

The Metropolitan Opera star sang the Leoncavallo aria in his first picture, "Here's to Romance," and its reception was so sensational that Producer Jesse L. Lasky asked him to encore it in full costume in his first RKO Radio production.

Martini also will sing five other songs in "Music for Madame."

Miss Westlake on RKO Keith Roster

Cynthia Westlake, dark-haired Los Angeles girl, who made her screen debut in "New Faces of 1937," has been signed to a long-term contract by RKO Radio Pictures.

Her first assignment under the new contract will be a part in "Forty Naughty Girls," now filming with James Gleason and ZaSu Pitts co-featured.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Preview Audience Finds "Toast of New York" to Be Big Picture of Early New York Full of Excitement

Life Story of Jim Fisk Forms Groundwork of Romantic Melodrama, Executed on Huge Scale; Fish Take Over the Short Reels; Two Festival Programs This Week; Notes of the Theater World.

BELL.

FROM the first flash of its main title on the screen, it becomes obvious that RKO-Radio set out to make a picture of the first rank in "The Toast of New York."

The main title of a picture, to be sure, is not an infallible index to the character or quality of the celluloid story that is to follow, but those who gaze at motion picture screens as part of their life work learn, in time, to form a quick, if sometimes subconscious, impression of what the picture is apt to be like from the manner in which the interminable list of "screen credits" are set forth—the cameramen, sound technicians, wardrobe experts, adaptors, etc., etc. The photographic and artistic treatment of all the remainder of the film is likely to be indexed by this comparatively brief—although seemingly too long—recital of the printed history of the subject in hand.

It was so yesterday afternoon at the preview of "The Toast of New York." The main title revealed a painstaking treatment that was carried throughout the length of the film. If it was the intention of the producers to make a picture of the first rank, it would be the opinion of this observer that they succeeded with just a bit of a grand flourish.

"The Toast of New York" primarily is the life story of Jim Fisk and the triumphs and havoc he wrought in Wall Street in the reconstruction days immediately following the War Between the States. To those whose recollections, or reading, do not take them back quite to that remote era in the formulation of our financial structure the biographical aspects of the story will be negligible. It nevertheless will highlight the salient events in a colorful and spectacular life, packed with melodrama and continuously interesting and exciting.

In addition to Fisk, the principal figures in the play are his partners and the financial Titans of their day—"Uncle" Daniel Drew, plundered of his Erie Railroad; Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt and the ruling figures of the New York Stock Exchange. The romantic interest of the tale centers in Josie Mansfield, met first as maid to a music hall star, whose ambition it is to become a great actress. She, at least, becomes a widely acclaimed star under the patronage of Fisk and the avalanche of gold he cascaded upon her.

There are certain strong analogies that might be drawn between "The Toast of New York" and the same star's earlier "Diamond Jim," except that in the view of this column the present subject is by far the bigger and more engrossing entertainment of the two.

Edward Arnold and Frances Farmer make an effective team in an emblazoned realm of romance, although Miss Farmer has yet to melt the chill that characterizes most of her work before the cameras. She reads her lines effectively from a mask that is too often immobile. Cary Grant plays his most serious role to date as Nick Boyd, Fisk's partner, and Jack Oakie supplies a subdued—for him—vein of comedy as the third member of the firm that started out in the South with a medicine wagon.

A complete review of "The Toast of New York," of course, will appear in these columns on Thursday morning. In the meantime, it will be enough of a hint to say that the elaborate plans that are being made for a "gilded age" preview tomorrow night seem to be wholly justified.

Washington's short-reel screen features this week seem to have gone suddenly piscatorial. Something was said in yesterday's review of the Rialto's new bill concerning "Fish From Hell," three reels of battling with the death-dealing denizens of the deep—if you can do with a spot of alliteration. Over at the Trans-Lux there is another fish item of a totally different nature, devoted to the multicolored "Betta splendens," a native of Siamese waters that can be trained to fight much after the manner of pit bull dogs. Being of a chivalrous breed, only the males of the species do battle. They are licensed to fight, it seems, like pugilists, and return a considerable income to the government in fees. The "Bettas" reel at the Trans-Lux is executed in natural color and affords an excellent opportunity for us landlocked lubbers to "learn one thing each day."

This is the week when two festival programs are to be given in the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds, instead of the customary one.

Tonight, the bill will be presented by the Lisa Gardiner Dancers, preceded by a concert by the United States Marine Band. Thursday night, the Blackfriars Guild will enact Justin Huntley McCarthy's play of "If I Were King," with a cast composed of both Washington and out-of-town players.

Both of these events are sponsored by the Community Service Department and the Office of National Capital Parks. The "If I Were King" program will be augmented by preliminary music by the Washington Civic Orchestra—weather permitting.

Although generally accepted as an English actor, and speaking precisely as English actors are supposed to speak, Romney Brent, appearing as Elisabeth Bergner's effervescent young husband in "Dreaming Lips," at the Rialto, is a Mexican. He was born Romulo Larralde in Saltillo, Mexico, on January 26, 1902. Raymond Massey, Miss Bergner's other leading man in this film, usually looked upon as a Londoner born and bred, is a native of Toronto, Ontario. So now you know—or are reminded.

Jerry Perkins, vocal soloist with Mal Hallett's Orchestra, opening on the Earle stage Friday, is glad the band played for two weeks at the Paramount Theater in New York. Film scouts from two companies "caught" his act and the result was two screen tests. Mr. Perkins is said, quite understandably, to be pins-and-needling the results of the tests.

The Perkins voice reputedly ranges from low "Crosby" notes to a high, clear falsetto, in the Gene Austin manner. But the combined result is said to be strictly and unstealably Perkins. Well, Friday isn't too long to wait to find out.

If you see a fleet of trucks back up to the National Theater 'most any day now, it probably will be the shipment of new chairs with which the refurbished playhouse is to be made one of the Capital's most comfortable tabernacles of the drama. Don't pester Manager Eddie Plohn for an opportunity to try them out on your vertebrae, however, until the boys have had a chance to nail them down.

Dean Herrick, remembered as the young wizard of the Hammond electric organ with Bert Granoff, when Washington's favorite tenor returned to the Earle stage from a year in Chicago a few months ago, is having a hard time trying to get to Cape Town. So. Africa, on a freighter. Mr. Herrick was signed to a three-year contract as organist at the Loew Theater in Cape Town at the suggestion of Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., on the strength of his showing at the Earle.

He thought a freighter would be a fine way to travel, evidently tearing a page from Noel Coward's book. The freighter, it seems, threw a rudder about 1,000 miles out at sea and Mr. Herrick is now marooned at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

His only solace, one gathers, is that, being the only passenger aboard, he is enabled to lounge around in his shorts, grow a long beard and not have to go to work much before the first of September. Some people get all the breaks.

Singing Cowboy Forsakes Range

Dick Foran will never ride the range again. He's hung up his boots and saddle. His trusty shooting iron will soon get rusty. The singing cowboy is no more.

After letting Dick Foran star in westerns for two years, Warner Bros. decided he was ripe for bigger and better things. So now Dick Foran will sing his way to fame in bigger and better pictures.

Dumb Like Fox.

Despite the fact that Mary Boland specializes in the portrayal of dumb, fluttery matrons, such as she enacts in "Danger—Love at Work," she is one of Hollywood's most brilliant conversationalists out of make-up.

'Diamond Doll.'

"The Diamond Doll," an unpublished original story by Jane Hinton Smith, has been purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

Signed by Twentieth Century-Fox

Never mind the bathing suit of white jersey, dotted in red to match the "bra" top and worn over red jersey shorts. The important thing is the handsome young woman in it. She is Elsie Valentine, a promising young player on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot, who recently has been signed to a term contract by that alert organization. You will see her on the screen soon—maybe the bathing suit, too.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Aug. 2.—That bewhiskered bromide, "It is the woman who pays and pays," may be an amusing cliche to the rest of the world—but to Hollywood's alimony-ruined males, it is insult added to injury, a picador's dart buried in the quivering flesh of a goaded bull. Hollywood is an alimony mine and more than a few beauteous ladies make a profession of working the diggings!

JANE WITHERS.

They have dug high-salaried stars and directors right out of the industry. Marshall Neilan, once a multi-thousand-dollar-a-week director, for instance. At the time of his second divorce, he was riding the financial crest and his alimony payments were fixed accordingly. Two years later, reverses which should have been only temporary made it impossible for him to keep his former wife in the luxury to which she wished to be accustomed. The lady was adamant—and Mickey Neilan had the hard choice of going to jail for non-payment (sure, they have a law like that in California) or going to court and admitting to a Hollywood which has no use for "has-beens," that he had started down the professional skids. He went into court and was written a failure.

Thousand-dollar-a-week alimony claims and two-hundred-thousand-dollar cash settlements are commonplace in Filmtown divorce suits. Yet, in nine cases out of ten, the ladies who reap the golden harvest have been married to the man less than a year and have no children to care for. I know one actor who pays alimony to three wives. The stuff he uses to write their checks looks like red ink to me—but he calls it his heart's blood. Try telling him it is the woman who pays!

Had lunch today with James Cagney and the conversation drifted—as his conversation usually does—to the pet Cagney theme, kindness to animals. He launched such a flood of inspired invective against the brutes who hunt and kill game animals and game birds that I listened in open-mouthed admiration and couldn't rally my sense of logic for a good five minutes after he had made a rousing finish. I then ventured to remind him that he was eating a T-bone and asked him to explain the inconsistency. Am I imagining things, or did the Cagney neck actually turn red?

Meet Jane Withers, racketeer. The other day she suggested an added scene to Al Werker, who is directing her in her current opus, and he liked it so well that he not only had it written into the script but urged Jane to make other suggestions. "What is there in it for me?" demanded the Withers prodigy, suddenly gone canny. They finally compromised on a new doll for each acceptable suggestion, and Jane, ever since, has been coining ideas by the gross. Most of them are duds, but she has added three new dolls to her collection.

Hollywood, the one town that might well be bored with movie stars by now, is the hottest hotspot in all fandom. Unruly crowds surge in front of every preview theater and night club and mob the unwary celebrities who enter. Every haberdashery, jewelry store and grocery proudly displays its collection of autographed star photos—most of them phonies—to convince you that Gloria Whoozis and Johnny Stalwast trade there. The walls of every restaurant are littered with portraits of the movie greats who, you are asked to believe, eat there daily and call the proprietor by his nickname. The rest of the world may revolve around the sun, but Hollywood revolves around the stars.

Hugh Encounters 'Old Army Game'

A new version of "hold the baby" gag was worked on Hugh Herbert, comedian recently.

Hugh drove into a public market and was greeted effusively by a sweet young thing. He helped her lift a huge basket filled with groceries onto the checker's counter as he tried to place her.

His hands fluttered nervously as he tried to recall where he had met her—whether she was a friend of his wife's, a neighbor, or a movie extra who had worked in one of his pictures.

Once a boy scout, Hugh offered to carry out the multitude of bags for the loquacious young lady. She hesitated a moment with the casher and then skipped along to join him.

They chatted for a moment, the girl drove away and Hugh returned to the market to make his purchases. The cashier handed him a sales check for $8.32.

"The young lady said you would pay for the groceries, Mr. Herbert?" said the cashier accusingly.

New Stuff.

House trailers are beginning to supplant the portable dressing rooms that the stars use on the movie sets. The latest to get a house trailer is Eddie Cantor, who is starring in "Ali Baba Goes to Town." The trailers are easier to move from one sound stage to another than are the old-style dressing rooms.

Lost at Sea.

George O'Brien, star of George Hirliman's production, "Windjammer," and the picture company filming scenes on board of an old schooner, were actually lost at sea for four hours when an auxiliary motor failed and the ship became becalmed.

Ta-Ra-Ta-Ta.

More than 200 dress extras recently spent two days at Twentieth Century-Fox studios in learning to dance German waltzes of World War days for a sequence in "Lancer Spy." The scene will last for only a minute on the screen.

Arthur Lyons, the theatrical agent, handles Jack Benny and will get 10 per cent of Benny's new million-dollar contract. "Benny can name his own figure, so why does he need you?" Arthur was asked. "Well," the agent explained, "don't I stay out Sunday night and listen to his program, wondering whether he's good enough?" . . .

DOROTHY STONE, who, with her husband, Charles Collins, has been appearing in "Gay Divorcee" at Jones Beach Stadium, made her debut with her famous father in "Stepping Stones." Charles Dillingham, the producer, decided that Fred Stone alone was to be starred. He believed that if Dorothy were to be featured, the nervousness might impair her debut. And so before the curtain-rise the marquee read "Fred Stone, in 'Stepping Stones'."

DURING THE FIRST ACT Dorothy's nervousness disappeared, and the first-nighters applauded her. Dillingham didn't delay. At the first-act intermission the audience stared with amazement at a group of stage hands changing the marquee billing to read "Fred and Dorothy Stone, in 'Stepping Stones'."

ONE OF THE SCENES in Warner's new film, "Expensive Husbands," required a setting of a beautiful mansion with a spacious lawn. Bobby Connolly, directing the film, found just the home he'd need. He was attracted especially by the luxurious stretch of lawn, and told the officials to arrange for the rental . . . Arrangements were made, and so, with company and camera, Connolly prepared to start the screening. Gone, however, was the luxurious lawn. The owner had exacted a proviso that it be covered with protective carpets of artificial grass.

Ranger Beats Endeavour Decisively in 2d Race; Wins by 18 Minutes

Sports | The Washington Post | Sports

Vanderbilt's Yacht Wins By 2½ Miles

Overcomes Early Lead of Challenger to Take Second Contest.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 2.—Ranger, Harold S. Vanderbilt's "Galloping Ghost" of the sailing seas, handed T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II a record-smashing drubbing today of such proportions that the British challenger for the America's Cup promptly took "time out" before resuming what now looks like a hopeless pursuit of the fastest "J" sloop this country ever sent to the yachting wars.

After trailing his American rival across the finish line of a 30-mile triangular course by 15 minutes 12 seconds, approximately 3 miles, thereby sustaining his second straight defeat by a margin even more crushing than was witnessed Saturday, Sopwith immediately requested and received permission from the New York Yacht Club's race committee for a day's postponement.

The third race thus will be set back to Wednesday while the Briton seeks some means of getting results from a boat that tonight appeared to be as soundly licked, in every respect, as any challenger in America's Cup history.

It was planned among other things tonight to haul Endeavor II out of the water at the Herreshoff yards in nearby Bristol and give her o thorough going-over.

Ranger, now needing only two more victories to settle all that remains of the sixteenth seaging argument for possession of the most highly prized trophy in international yacht racing, achieved her second straight triump this afternoon the hard way.

The speedy white-hulled defender spotted her rival a starting advantage on the haze-enshrouded ocean, trailing Endeavour II by as much as a furlong for the better part of an hour's brisk racing — which struck the day's only exciting note —and then proceeded to make it another runaway in increasing southwesterly winds.

Vanderbilt's snub-nosed sloop made every mark a winning one over a course consisting of a 10-mile beat to windward, then two broad reaches of similar distance in breezes that ranged from 8.2 miles an hour at the start to 11.3 at the finish.

Ranger rounded the first buoy with a lead of 10 minutes 25 seconds, equivalent to a good mile and a half, after shaking off Endeavour II with such startling ease on a long port tack that onlookers were left gasping in wonderment and Sopwith left with nothing but another boatload of frustration.

The defender increased its lead to 16:18 at the next mark, equivalent to a margin of 2½ miles, and then set double headsails for the homeward reach, so far in front that even the spectator fleet had to leave the challenger all alone in order to get a peak at the victor's finish.

Adding another half-mile for good measure on the final leg, which she sailed in slightly less than an hour to top off a brilliant performance, Ranger crossed the finish line in 3 hours 41 minutes 33 seconds, with Endeavour barely in sight against the sun-splashed background of the painted, white-capped ocean. The challenger's finishing time was 4:00:05.

Ranger's margin of victory, 18 minutes 32 seconds, represented the most decisive ever achieved over a 30-mile triangular course in America's Cup competition. It was nearly a minute and a half greater than her big edge in Saturday's opening race, which saw the two boats finish 17 minutes 5 seconds apart and left Sopwith's challenger in as hopelessly beaten a spot as any visitor in cup annals.

Over a similar course, the biggest previous margin was only 12:23, by which Vigilant beat the British boat Valkyrie off Sandy Hook in 1893.

Not since 1887 has there been any wider margin of difference in a cup race sailed under any conditions or any course. A half century ago Volunteer began the successful defense by licking Thistle by 19:23:75 in the first race.

Theoretically Sopwith and Endevour II still have a chance. The British are no worse off, so far as results are concerned, than Vanderbilt was with Rainbow in 1934 after losing the first two races off these shores to the first Endeavour.

By the Associated Press.

Joseph Hunt, Los Angeles, top seeded junior star and tournament favorite, advanced without playing, as Ed Headington, of Texas, defaulted. Kovacs drew a bye and then soundly trounced Richard Wade, Glencoe, Ill., 6—1, 6—2. Kovacs is seeded second. Bellis won by default and then defeated Bob Patterson, Tulsa, Okla., 6—1, 6—3. Greenberg won twice without trouble, trimming Robert Pohl, Dayton, Ohio, 6—2, 6—0, and then marching through Dan Kreer, Winnetka, Ill., 6—2, 6—2.

The only seeded junior to have trouble was Louis Faquin, Memphis, Tenn., who dropped a long set before eliminating Robert Proctor, of Bronxville, N. Y., 6—8, 6—2, 6—0.

The boys' play ran true to form, Robert Carrothers, of Conrondo, Calif., playing his first national tournament, served notice that he was not misplaced when installed as favorite by winning two matches with the loss of only one game. He defeated Harry Greiner, Evansville, Ind., 6—0, 6—1, and later swamped Fred Dontel, of South Bend, 6—0, 6—0.

Second and third round singles and the opening round of doubles are scheduled for tomorrow.

Browns Open 3-Day Stand Against Nats

Lowly Club Boasts 3 Outfield Aces; Ferrell Vs. Hogsett.

The team with the hardest-hitting outfield in the American League, the St. Louis Browns, opens a three-day stand against the Nats at Griffith Stadium this afternoon.

The Browns, lacking only consistent pitching to brand them one of the better teams in the league, owe to the slugging proclivities of their outfielders what little they have achieved this season.

Beau Bell, Sammy West and Joe Vosmik round out an outfield trio which can show better batting figures for the 1937 season than that of any other club. Vosmik alone is hitting below the .340 mark and he is but one point below. Big Bell boasts a .349 average and West is hitting at a .342 clip.

Elon Hogsett, the old left hander who beat the Nats with ridiculous ease the last time he faced 'em in St. Louis, is very naturally the pitching choice of Manager Jim Bottomley for today's game. Hogsett was the only St. Louis hurler to beat the Nats in five games at St. Louis last month.

Bucky Harris, returning to his regular pitching schedule after experimenting with young Bucky Jacobs on Sunday, will send Wes Ferrell against the Browns today. Ferrell won something of a hollow victory over the St. Louis club in his last start against the Browns, beating 'em, 16 to 10.

President Clark Griffith of the Nats yesterday turned down a proposition by the Richmond club to take over young Jacobs' contract for the remainder of the season. Richmond, which visualized Jacobs as a powerful drawing card in his home town, wanted Jacobs badly.

"If we send Jacobs out, it will be to bolster one of our farm teams—Chattanooga, Trenton or Charlotte," said Griffith. "I promised him that I would not farm him this season, but I think he is convinced now that it would be to his interest. A bit of experience in minor league ball will help him. He has native talent and proved to me that he is game. If he puts on a few pounds before next season, he will have a fast ball to mix up with a curve that is already pretty good."

Gevinson, Badly Beaten, Hits Canvas in Eighth

His eyes hardly visible, Lou Gevinson, local contender for the featherweight championship, is shown as he collapsed under a barrage of hard blows to the head for the first of three knockdowns in the eighth round of his fight with Joey Archibald, of Providence, R. I., last night, finally being carried to his corner by Referee Denny Hughes to save him from further punishment at the hands of the winner. Joey is shown as he turns from his victim to await the count in a neutral corner.

Below, Archibald is shown as he beats Lou to the punch in an exchange of blows in the sixth round. This was Gevinson's best round.

'Get Him for Me Again, Matt,' Beaten Gevinson Sobs at End

Little Capital Battler Declares 'He Didn't Hurt Me, Honest; I Can Take Him Next Time.'

By Shirley Povich.

"Get him for me again, Matt—please."

It was Lou Gevinson raising a pathetic plea to his manager as he sat slumped there on his stool in the Griffith Stadium ring last night, his face a bloody mask and his one good eye bringing him the scene of jubilation across the ring in Joey Archibald's corner.

Matt Twomney's only answer was to pat Gevinson on the back and continue sponging down his face before leading the lad back to the dressing room he hal left only 45 minutes before to do battle with Archibald, the 2-to-1 favorite.

In the dressing room it was discovered that Archibald, the winner by a technical knockout in the eighth round, had left his mark on Gevinson. A two-inh capital X in the form of a cut under the Washington lad's puffed right eye did nothing to improve his appearance.

"He didn't hurt me, Matt. Honest, Matt. I can take him next time."

"Stopped Fight Too Soon."

"He was punching a bit too much with one hand, but my only complaint is that they stopped it too soon. Lou could have stayed in there and anything could have happened. He might have caught Archibald coming in to finish him off with one of those lefts and it might have been Lou's fight. I didn't want 'em to stop it. Lou wasn't hurt.

Forty feet across the hall in the opposite dressing room, little Archibald wasn't the same cocky kid who had said all week that he would put Gevinson away. He was cockier.

"Naw, he never hurt me once," said Joey. "I just let him come to me and ruin himself. I was stalling around in there until I felt ready to pop him. Then I went to work. You saw what happened.

"Good boy, that Gevinson, but he's a southpaw—just a southpaw!" continued Archibald, wiping the blood from a pair of tiny cuts high on his cheek.

"I love southpaws. Beat 'em to the punch every time. You noticed that, didn't ya? Yea, I love southpaws."

He was talking cocky, indeed, for a fellow who probably owed to the sixth round bell and Gevinson's greenness the victory that followed in the eighth.

Despite the furious pace they set, both Archibald and Gevinson were not even breathing heavily as their handlers swabbed them down in the dressing room.

"Don't that guy Gevinson ever get tired?" Archibald was saying.

And across the hall at almost the same time, Lou Gevinson was saying the same thing about that guy Archibald.

Blow-by-Blow Account of the Fight

ROUND ONE.

Gevinson, dead serious, was short with a light left as the calm Archibald backed away. Joey drove a hard right to the body and Lou covered. Lou clipped Joey with a hard right to the head and Joey countered with a right. With Gevinson against the ropes, Joey unleashed a harmless flurry and Gevinson danced away. Lou caught Joey with a hard left to the chin and Joey bounced off the ropes fighting. Archibald was hooking to Gevinson's head and scoring repeatedly. Well within himself, Gevinson was sparring with Joey at the bell. Round even.

ROUND TWO.

Fighting cautiously, both were short with lefts and then Lou chased Joey to the ropes with a stiff left to the head. He missed another vicious left, but in Joey's corner started a withering right to Joey's body. A left uppercut brought blood from Joey's mouth and Lou speared Archibald with a straight left that caused him to back away. Joey rushed Lou against the ropes, but took another left jolt to the chin and both were swinging wildly. Rushing Joey to the ropes, Lou took two spearing jabs in the face. The bell found 'em mixing it furiously. Gevinson's round.

ROUND THREE.

Joey bounced about seeking a spot for his right and then stabbed with a stiff left to the face. Against the ropes, Archibald had the better of the exchange, as both lads showed no signs of abandoning the furious pace. Backing away, Joey was met with a hard left hook that straightened him up, the stiffest blow of the bout. Archibald missed a right and Lou clipped him with another withering left to the chin. Still the agressor, Joey laughed as Lou missed with a long right. Joey beat Lou to the punch as both threw rights to the head and Lou backed away and sparred. Joey gave Lou a friendly tap in Gevinson's corner after the bell. Gevinson's round.

ROUND FOUR.

Miffed by Gevinson's southpaw style, Joey was short with both left and right but ducked neatly under a looping left. He took a right to the chin in Lou's corner and then countered with a stiffr right that brought Gevinson up sharply. Joey was showing a willingness to mix it and in a flurry of infighting dug stiff rights to Lou's body. He clipped Lou with a hard right to the head and Lou was glad to clinch. Joey tagged Gevinson with a right cross and Lou went back to a clinch. They exchanged two powerful lefts to the head and Gevinson was obviously worried by Joey's bouncing inside tactics. Archibald's round.

ROUND FIVE.

Gevinson appeared slightly weary of it all as the bell sounded and his low left brought a warning look from Referee Hughes. Blood showed about Lou's nose. Joey sank a hard right into Lou's stomach and twice clipped him with lefts to the head. Gevinson's pace was slowed and he missed three rights and lefts as Joey was open against the ropes. Joey's bobbing, ducking tactics left Gevinson without a target and Archibald came out of a crouch with a stiff left to Lou's face. Countering, Lou dug a hard left into Joey's mouth. Gevinson clipped Joey with a terrific left to the mouth as Joey came in bobbing, and blood spurted from Archibald's face. Joey was sagging at the bell. Gevinson's round.

ROUND SIX.

ROUND SEVEN.

Showing no disposition to resume leading, Archibald was content to duck as Lou attempted to open him up for his left. Off the ropes, Joey caught Lou with a terrific right to the chin and Lou backed away. Against the ropes again, Joey bashed Lou with another stiff right and Gevinson was glad to spar. Archibald slipped to his knees as he missed a right and Gevinson generously stepped aside. Joey met Lou coming in with a steaming right to the chin and then beat him to the punch as they both threw rights to the head. Lou scored with a hard left to the head and withheld another punch as the gong sounded. Archibald's round.

ROUND EIGHT.

The pace slowed as both sought openings and Lou was short with a left as Joey backed away. Joey sent two steaming lefts and a right to Lou's chin but Gevinson showed no disposition to back away. Lou missed wildly with a left and took a hard left to the eye in return. Archibald, literally laughing in Gevinson's face, planted two short rights high on Lou's head and then clipped Lou with a terrific overhead right that sent him to the canvas in a neutral corner. On one knee Lou took the count of nine and Joey floored him again with a hard right for no count. As Gevinson arose and staggered across the ring, Archibald clipped him with another right that sat him on his haunches against the ropes. His face was a bloody mask. Lou protested feebly as Referee Hughes waved Archibald away and helped Gevinson to his corner, without starting a count. It was a technical knockout victory for Archibald in 2 minutes and 45 seconds of the eighth round.

Fight Halted By Referee In 8th Round

Lou, Helpless on Ropes, Pleads to Continue; Game in Defeat.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

One puffed and bruised eye almost closed, his face a gory mask of blood, and his perspiring brown body worn and weary by the merciless fists of his opponent, Lou Gevinson's bid for a chance at the world featherweight boxing championship ended prematurely last night at Griffith Stadium with the game little southpaw hanging on the ropes.

Joey Archibald, the midget mauler from Rhode Island with a keen, alert mind to guide his sharp, penetrating punches put Gevinson on the canvas three times in the eighth and final round, winning at long last on a technical knockout.

A throng of 6,800 fans, a record attendance for the fistic firm of Turner and Ahearn, poured approximately $10,000 into the box-office for the privilege of witnessing the bout.

The end came 2 minutes and 45 seconds after the start of the round, just 15 seconds before the bell would have given Gevinson a fleeting chance to recover, partially at least, from his antagonist's brutal blows.

Pleads to Continue.

But to his credit let it be recorded that the little Southwest Washington gamester didn't quit under fire. A pitiful figure as he swayed uncertainly on the ropes, he pleaded with Referee Denny Hughes to let him continue. And that was after he had twice gotten up off the resin-swept floor to meet the withering fire of his conquerer. He was as great in defeat as he would have been in victory, possibly greater.

Gevinson carried the battle to Archibald, winning four of the first seven rounds on The Post's scoresheet to two for Joey. One, the first, was even. Further proof of the bout's closeness were the judges' scoresheets, which, up until the fatal eighth, had matters even. Referee Denny Hughes' card showed Gevinson to be two points ahead at the end of the seventh; Judge Bob Eller had Archibald in front by two; and Judge C. C Dunn had them even.

Experience was the deciding factor in the gruelling struggle. Archibald's years of experience sharply contrasting to Lou's months of professional warfare. The crafty and cocky little man made Gevinson come to him from bell to bell, biding his time for the crucial moment he knew must come. The Washington bred battler dogged Joey's footsteps throughout the fight, wading in, vainly trying to make an opening for his deadly left. He never found one.

Lou Best in Sixth.

Archibald, smiling confidently as he bobbed and weaved under Gevinson's blows, lay in ambush for his man like a cat, springing on him literally, with both fists when Lou least expected it.

But, even while the rugged Rhode Islander cautiously and smoothly lured Gevinson into his well-laid trap, he was taking a beating. Gevinson's sixth round attack was his best. Midway through the period he caught Joey with a sickening left to the pit of the stomach, forcing Archibald to clinch. It was almost a knockout punch, certainly the forerunner of one, but the woefully inexperienced lad failed to follow up with the killing blow. Archibald's experience guided him safely through the last minute of the bruising milling until the welcome sound of the bell called a halt.

As early as the second round Gevinson brought his opponent to a grinding stop with a vicious left to the head, followed by a withering right to the body. He speared him again with a straight left to the mouth that drew the claret, erasing the smile from Joey's face. But Archibald called on his store of ring lore to tide him over the rough spot, and Gevinson's blistering attack floundered in the face of a clever defense.

Archibald gave the screaming spectators a glimpse of the wrath to come in the fourth round, when he smacked Lou with a looping right to the jaw that brought him up sharply. Gevinson pawed weakly at Joey with an impotent right, only to meet with two sharp rights to the body that slowed him down to a walk. He tired badly and was more than

Latona Wins To Advance With Farrin

Bradley Loses in 3rd Set; Heacock Victor at Edgewood.

Tony Latona, seeded fourth, moved into the fourth round of the second renewal of the Middle Atlantic singles championships yesterday, when he eliminated Bob Bradley, former Harvard University ace, in their resumed match, 6—2, 7—9, 6—1, being joined by Lieut. James Farrin, U. S. N., seventh seeded player, and Chales Heacock, unseeded, at the Edgemoor Club courts.

Latona and Bradley began play in the third set, each having won one Sunday before their match was postponed by darkness. Latona lost little time in disposing of his red-haired opponent, winning in easy style. Farrin advanced by defeating Hubert Simmons, of Harrisburg, Pa., 7—5, 5—7, 8—6, while Heacock won from Joel Baker, 6—4, 8—6, in their third-round match.

The foreign crop was greatly reduced as W. J. Tilden 3d and Tom Ridgeway, the second and third seeded players, respectively, bowed by default, failing to appear for their matches. Goeltz, seeded No. 1 among the out-of-town entries, won his second-round match from George Botts by default.

CHICKLING went into contention with a rush during the opening quarter-mile after being in close quarters during the opening sixteenths; went into a long lead after disposing of BETHERE and won as if outclassing her opposition. SPICY worked her way up gradually and came with good energy in the closing drive. EYELASHES dashed away slowly, but closed an immense gap.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SOCIAL ERROR, $8.80, $4.20, $3.20; MARIENNE, $5.80, $4.40; STORY TIME, $5.00.

SOCIAL ERROR, prominent from the start, was rated along within striking distance of the leaders until reaching the stretch, took command when called upon and drew out steadily during the last furlong. MARIENNE displayed good speed in pacemaking, made a determined bid to go along with the winner when challenged, but was not good enough. STORY TIME improved her position gradually and closed with good courage.

DAILY DOUBLE (CHICKLING AND SOCIAL ERROR) PAID $35.60.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:27. Off at 3:29½. Winner, Mrs. W. Russell's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PICK OUT, $9.40, $5.00, $3.60; CRUSAND, $5.00, $3.80; RHODIUM, $4.80.

PICK OUT was outrun early, began bettering her position after rounding from the backstretch, moved up stoutly after reaching the stretch and wore down RHODIUM inside the last sixteenth to draw out in the closing strides. CRUSAND, restrained for the first half-mile, came through with good energy in the closing three-sixteenths. RHODIUM, away well, moved up on the outside to gain command, opened up a good lead, but flattened out when reaching the stretch and barely lasted to save third from FLY ME.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:06½. Winner, Mrs. E. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MY KIN, $17.00, $8.00, $5.60; LADDIE STONE, $3.80, $3.00; EBONY PARASOL, $4.80.

MY KIN was rated along under slight restraint during the first three furlongs, moved forwardly when called upon and, closing stoutly out in the middle of the track, was up in the closing stride. LADDIE STONE was unruly at the post, moved up fast on the outside nearing the far turn, went into an easy lead, saved ground into the stretch and, weakening in the last sixteenth, just failed to last. EBONY PARASOL, unable to keep up during the initial half-mile, came willingly in the closing drive to outlast STRANGE TIMES for third.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000. The Cambridge Purse; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:36½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAVARRE, $11.40, $2.60, $2.20; DROWSY, $2.20, $2.20; SWIVELNECK, $2.60.

NAVARRE was steadied along in closest chase of the pace established by COMBATANT, went to the front when called upon and, holding on gamely under vigorous urging, held DROWSY safe. The latter, weakly ridden, was caught in close quarters after rounding the first turn when taken back of the pace, came gamely in the stretch run and just failed to be along in time. SWIVELNECK, a trailer until leaving the backstretch, closed a good gap in the last three furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,100. The Cape Ann Claiming Purse. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:08. Two-dollar mutuels paid—REEL ON, $15.60, $6.20, $5.20; HUNTERDON, $5.20, $3.80; PRINCE FOX, $6.20.

REEL ON was steadied along within striking distance of the pacemaker for the first six furlongs, responded gamely when called upon, went to the front when POKEAWAY began shortening strides and held HUNTERDON safe to the close. HUNTERDON moved up stoutly on the outside in the last three furlongs, came to the outside when reaching the stretch and although finishing with good energy was unable to reach the leader. PRINCE FOX, restrained until leaving the backstretch, continued gamely to the end.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place, same. Went to post at 5:42. Off at 5:46½. Winner, Mrs. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK STING, $7.80, $4.80, $3.00; JEAN LEE, $5.40, $4.00; LUCKY JEAN, $3.80.

JACK STING was away slowly and outpaced until leaving the backstretch, went into contention with a rush and, moving along on the outside when reaching the stretch, wore down the leaders to draw out in the last sixteenth. JEAN LEE was in the first flight throughout and held on stubbornly in the closing drive. LUCKY JEAN, hard hustled to show the way early, held on gamely under pressure, but was unable to stave off the closing bids of the first two.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 6:17. Off at 6:18½. Winner, C. GAY DOG outran his field from the start, drew into a good lead and, steadied along in front, held sway to the end, although ridden out sharply to the end. AUREATE moved up in the run down the backstretch, raced in closest chase of the winner for most of the way and continued with good energy to the end. Bing, Warned He'd Lose Shirt, Put Over Race Track With Bang

By the Associated Press

Del Mar, Calif., Aug. 2.—A freshman promoter no longer, Bing Crosby tucked his first turf season away with a plump profit today and busily prepared for bigger and better things at Del Mar race track.

Whether Bing Crosby the promoter eventually will show more profit than Bing Crosby the crooner remained an unanswered question, but evidence from the 22-day inaugural meeting gave an indication in that direction.

For in spite of dire warnings that he would lose his shirt in the race track business the pari-mutuels records showed a $177,946 "take" for the brief meeting, not to mention considerable profit from concessions.

The handle for the meeting was $2,224,325, for a daily average of $101,105.68. Approximately 75,000 patrons went through the turnstiles of the little plant.

Crosby estimated the track would need to get $66,000 to pay expenses and today he laid plans for a full 25 days' meeting next summer with $100,000 worth of improvements on the plant in the meantime. After all, he figured, almost $200,000 isn't a bad return in a few weeks. He has the site leased for ten years.

By comparison to his radio and picture earnings the pari-mutuels more than held their own.

Bing makes in salary $125,000 for each of his three pictures a year. Then he picks up $5,000 a week for 39 weeks of the year for radio work.

Breaking these figures down on a weekly basis for comparison, Crosby's track paid $44,486 a week, of which he, as the major stockholder, is entitled to approximately $33,000. His pictures do slightly more than $6,000, current salary, and his radio work $5,000.

Of course, Bing has nothing invested in pictures and radio but his throat. The track cost a million dollars.

Chamberlin Plans Major Golf Events

Old Point Comfort, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—Sidney Banks, president of the Chamberlin Country Club, said today the club planned a major golf program which would include a $5,000 open tournament in the spring, at least one State tourney a year and the return of the Midatlantic P. G. A. event each year.

"We cannot make any definite announcement in regard to the $5,000 open until all negotiations have been completed," Banks said, "but the Chamberlin Hotel is prepared to put up the money, if the proper date and entries can be obtained."

The open would be held in April, following the masters' tournament at Augusta, Ga., according to Bank's plans. The Midatlantic P. G. A. tournament was held Saturday and Sunday on the Chamberlin Club course. Top money was won by Leo Walper, of Washington.

Dear Al: Selections at Suffolk Downs.

The chart on Bennings Vacation Handicap: Start good (stopped by Delaware Park and won $43). Going to clubhouse turn—Dolores Bennings dropped chocolate cone down front of dress and bright lights failed on car Had to drive to Atlantic City on dims. At the quarter—Got too close to man selling kitchenware and was forced to help him cut tomatoes and took terrible ribbing. Down the backstretch—Sat on beach all day because water was cold, but sun proved hot. Had to sleep in 3 inches of talcum powder. At the half—Stopped by Delaware Park on way back and lost $86. Taken under strong restraint by Mrs. Bennings. Swinging for stretch—Changed plans and arrived at North Beach. Caught brass ring on merry-go-round while astride Foggy Dawn. At the three-quarters—Caught 14 hardheads and brought them home in back of car. Midway of stretch—Last of loose skin on back came off with shirt. At the finish—broke. After the race—Discovered three days later that I had taken only 13 hardheads out of car. I was Out to win, Out to place and Out to show. And I'll be OUT of a job if I don't get right down to picking some winners. So here goes. BILL.

First Race—Loloma appears to be the class of this field and may win it in Ranger style. Needs only the right handling by Jockey Ray. Zevanaid has plenty of speed and favors the sprint route. Lottafun promises to hold the ithers safe.

Second Race—Aura, tossed in this with only 102 pounds, seems ideally placed and may upset Grandpa's Boy, one that is the likely favorite. Two Edged has shown speed on occasions and promises to make a fight for a money position.

Third Race—Jockide may gain his first set of brackets in this maiden field. Breaks from the inside where his speed should keep him from trouble. Foggy Horn, not to be confused with Foggy Dawn, is a formidable contender. Autumn Quest has worked well.

Fourth Race—Good Dame appears to be the best thing of the day. Gets in action with 107 pounds and I expect her to find the shortest way to the wire. The Bailiff and Narise are the best fitted of the others

Fifth Race—Midshipman seems to be on his oats again and is assigned only 103 pounds. With alert handling, I expect this one to take the chief portion of the purse. Ruffy and the feather-weighted Gallant Eagle are ready to hold the others in check.

Sixth Race—Beau Edwina, with Jockey Jaekle in the saddle, may make every post a winning one in this company. Steelworker is a well-bred fellow and is due to awake with a bang. Nigrette should be no worse than third.

Seventh Race—Nipantuck and Long Bit are likely to wage a keen field. I'm giving the former a slight battle for the first honors in this edge. St. Moritz seems most likely to cause trouble among the others.

Eighth Race—Mad Frump is as good as those old legs. Might take a fall out of Hit And Run. Treasure Ship improved and downed cheap ones regularly at Delaware Park. May surprise in this field.

Best Bet—Good Dame.

Lincoln Fields Initial Stake Won by Pompa

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Col. Matt Winn opened his beautiful Lincoln Fields race track today as 10,000 persons saw H. H. Cotton's four-year-old Pompa race to victory in the featured Lincolnshire Country Club Handicap.

Nearly $200,000 was bet through the mutuel machines in the most auspicious opening day the track has had in five years. The meeting will continue for 30 days, and will be featured by the running of ten stake events, two each Saturday, during the five weeks.

Pompa, in winning the inaugural feature, showed himself to be a strong factor for the Crete Handicap, $2,500 added stake, which will be co-featured with the Dearborn Handicap next Saturday.

Ten went to the post in the Lincolnshire, at six furlongs, and the large opening day crowd made Rifted Clouds a slight choice. Miss Dolphin broke in front, closely followed by Jockey Bobby Dotter on Pompa, with Rifted Clouds, Reminiscent and Marmara also well up.

Miss Dolphin held a slight margin around the far turn, but always Dotter had Pompa right with her. Rifted Clouds raced in third position. Down the stretch as Pompa came around Miss Dolphin to take the lead, Candescent slipped through on the rail to challenge, while Leading Article came with a rush on the outside. In a sensational finish Pompa managed to hold his margin by a neck, with Candescent landing second and Leading Article third. The six furlongs were run in 1:11 1-5, only four-fifths off the track record. Pompa paid $12.40 to win.

The United States team defeated Sweden in an adjourned game, 2½-1½, and won from Noorway, 3-1.

Samuel Reshevsky, present American champion, drew with Stahlberg, of Sweden, while I. Kashdan, of the United States team, defeated the Swedish player Stoltz. In a third round match with Norway, Reshevsky drew with Herseth, and I. A. Horowitz, of the United States, defeated Salbu.

Muny Links Play Draws 191 Entries

Pairings Announced for District Entrants, 40 Teams Play.

A field of 191 public links golfers, 32 less than the record-breaking entry list of last year at Farmington, N. Y., will play in the 1937 U. S. G. A. public links championship over the Harding Memorial course in San Francisco, Calif., starting Monday, August 9.

Pairings and starting times released yesterday find the four Capital entrants paced by Claude Rippy, who plays with Ed Brown, of Louisville, Ky., and Harry Umbinetti, of Seattle, at 9:28 on Monday and 1:12 on Tuesday.

Andy Oliveri drew S. Tatol, of Dayton, Ohio, and William Love, of Hawthorne, Calif., as partners at 10:17 Monday and 2:01 on Tuesday, while Jimmy Gipe plays with Ralph Jordan, of Indianapolis, and Joseph Amaral, of San Jose, Calif., at 12:37 and 9 a. m. on the respective days.

Bobby Burton plays with an Easterner and Westerner, Earl Cameron, cf Albany and Kenneth Long, also of Hawthorne, Calif. Other leading pairings in the twin medal rounds find B. Patrick Abbott, the defending champion who defeated Rippy in the finals last year playing with the Hawaiian star, Kammy Lau, and Sam Musico, of Pittsburgh.

The Harding Cup team championship, won by Seattle, Wash., last year, finds 16 States, Hawaii and the District of Columbia sending four-man teams to the event, with the host State represented by 17 teams. New York and Ohio send teams from three cities, Pennsylvania and Minnesota two each and the rest one.

The field will play 18-hole rounds on Monday and Tuesday with the low 64 players qualifying for the match-play rounds and the low aggregate total among the four-man teams winning the cup. A pair of 18-hole match play rounds are carded Wednesday and Thursday, August 11 and 12, with the semi-finals slated over the 36-hole route on Friday and the finals Saturday.

Washington has not won the Harding Cup team trophy since 1934, when Earl McAleer, medalist, led the team to victory. Rippy was co-medalist with James Molinari last year, but the team trailed.

Cards to Open 'School' For Baseball Hopefuls

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 2 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals will open a weeks' tryout school here August 23 and the boys from the sandlots as well as the pros and semipros will have a chance to do their stuff for Charles Kelshner, the veteran scout of the Cards.

There will be no charge and anyone from 17 to 23, no matter where he comes from, may enter. The school will be run through the Rochester Club of the International League, a Cardinal "farm."

In a similar school run recently at Privicence, 855 players turned out and the Cardinals signed up 20. The Cardinals have agreements with 30 clubs.

The Big Breeze Blows Full Blast Again

By Shirley Povich.

Max Baer, who is taking himself seriously again, and in that connection represents a minority of one, hauled off the other day and picked himself as the winner of the Baer-Braddock bout next month in Chicago.

"After I put the old man on the floor, I'd like another crack at Louis," said Baer.

POVICH.

Another crack at Louis? What did the guy mean? If memory serves, Baer spent four rounds in the ring with Louis in 1935 and has yet to take a crack at him. He was content that evening with shivering in his boots and staying down for the full count the first time that Louis clipped him on the chin.

* * * *

After that Baer went into hiding, not even making the customary demand for a return match with the Detroit Negro. Not until Max Schmeling proved that Louis was not invincible, that he could be hit and hurt with a right hand did Baer, in company with a lot of other heavyweights, come out of their caves.

If there is now any demand for another Louis-Baer match then it exists only in Baer's imagination. The guys who paid $16.60 for ringside seats to the last fiasco and saw an utterly scared Baer make no attempt to make a fight out of it, want no more of Mr. Baer.

* * * *

He fooled 'em once with his prebattle bravado and they are willing to give him full credit for his trick, but if he fools 'em again he will be fooling only the fools.

* * * *

The American fight public began to get its fill of Mr. Baer during the fight in which he lost his title to Jimmy Braddock. On that evening, Baer, with a title that was worth, conservatively, a half-million dollars, made little attempt to defend it and got himself outpointed by a has-been. In those late rounds when he might, conceivably, have salvaged the decison, Baer was content to take it on the lam.

* * * *

But out in Los Angeles the other day, when he unburdened himself of a slew of fistic observations before he could be unquoted, which is always difficult, Baer didn't help his own case any.

He got off one crack about "Louis is a cinch to beat Farr. The Englishman is unorthodox; he bobs and weaves and couldn't kill a fly with a swatter."

* * * *

Which may be true, but if so, Baer had best keep mum on that score. Because this same Farr handed Maxie a pasting not so many months ago in England, and if Farr is that kind of a setup for Louis then it is only one more powerful argument against a resumption of Baer-Louis hostilities.

* * * *

"Max Schmeling is the toughest man I ever fought. He's the world's No. 1 heavyweight," said Baer, but how he ever arrived at that conclusion is also something of a mystery inasmuch as he, himself, knocked out Schmeling and then couldn't last four rounds with Joe Louis.

* * * *

* * * *

The only blot on Louis' record—that eight-round knockout by Max Schmeling last summer—was the product not of Schmeling's careful aim and prebattle plans but of a lucky punch, we learn at this late date.

* * * *

Bill Corum was sitting in on the All-Star game here when he told his version of the Schmeling-Louis affair which shed a deal of light on the ultimate victory of the German over the Negro.

* * * *

"I was sitting in Max's corner—only a couple of yards away in the press box when Max came into the ring," recited Corum. "He didn't look very happy to me. In fact, I thought he was downright scared when the referee called 'em out there for instructions. I've seen Schmeling in a dozen fights and he was always the picture of confidence, but that night he looked scared stiff.

* * * *

"Well, nothing much happened in that first round and Schmeling came back to his corner. Louis hadn't hit him with anything but a light left, but Max was apparently using his imagination.

" 'Dot Negro can heet hard,' Schmeling told his trainer, Max Machon, and Machon couldn't believe his ears. He got right down on his knees in front of Schmeling and pleaded with Max.

" 'But so can you heet hard—harder than he can heet,' said Machon. 'You will hurt him if you heet hard. For Gawd's sake, Max, go out and heet him.'

"There wasn't much impressive about Schmeling when he went back for that second round, and then all of a sudden he threw a right at Louis. It was a beaut and clipped Louis a bit high on the head and hurt him. That punch did for Louis. He was never the same and all Max had to do after that was chop him down.

"But I'll always believe that was a lucky punch by Schmeling. He threw it because he thought he was a gone guy and he might just as well go out swinging. It cured his fright and won the fight."

Welsh, Hunt Annex First Net Matches

McDiarmid, Nakano and Harris Upset; Riggs Easy Winner.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Jiro Yamagishi, Japanese Davis Cup star and No. 1 foreign seeded favorite, led the way into the second round of the Meadow Club's annual invitation tennis classic here this afternoon when he crushed Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, the intercollegiate champion, with the loss of only three games, 6—2, 6—1.

Yamagishi hit with remarkable speed and accuracy against the Southerner and completely outplayed him. Sutter played in his stocking feet, and later discarded even his socks, but even that didn't avail him anything. He was helpless to cope with the stream of truly astounding forehand and backhand drives which came off the flashing racquet of the Nipponese.

Two Washingtonians, Gilbert Hunt and Barney Welsh advanced. Hunt had an easy time with Martin Busby, of Miami, winning in two love sets. Welsh, however, was hard pressed to win from J. D. Anderson, English netman, eking out a 6—2, 4—6, 6—1 victory.

John McDiarmid, Princeton professor of political economy, who ranks seventh nationally and who occupied the No. 3 spot on the list of favorites, fell by the wayside. Gardner Mulloy, of Miami, Fla., who ranks twenty-ninth nationally, caught the professor on a bad day, and won in straight sets, 6—1, 6—4.

Two other "seeds," No. 5 listed Gilhall, and No. 8 spotted Sidney Wood, lived up to their reputations by notching easy, straight-set victories. Hall breezed through Charley Carr, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—1, and Wood didn't give the tournament chairman, Irwin A. Powell, a single game as he pounded out a 6—0, 6—0 win.

Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, last week's Seabright winner, did a bit of clowning around with Dwight F. Davis, jr., son of the Davis Cup donor, before he registered a 7—5, 6—3 victory over the society youngster.

Gregory Mangin, of New York, seeded behind Riggs, trimmed Elwood Cooke, jr., of Portland, Oreg., 6—3, 6—4. Gil Hall, No. 5, routed Charley Carr, of Los Angeles, 6—1, 6—1, and the former Davis Cup star, Sidney Wood, seeded eighth, took a pair of love sets from the tournament chairman, Irwin A. Powell.

Archibald Is Winner In Feature

Scores Technical Kayo Over Lou Gevinson at Stadium.

willing to hang on. But Archibald's bouncing, bobbing and bombing sent him to his corner a weak and worried youngster.

Archibald, evidently still feeling the effects of Gevinson's left to the stomach, started slowly in the seventh round, but stung Lou with another right to the head, coming off the ropes soon after the opening bell. Gevinson tried to box him, and Joey retaliated with another thundering right to the head, before missing with another and going down on both knees for no count. Lou caught his man with a lone left to the head just before the bell, and that was his last real punch of the night.

What a Right!

Gevinson took two steaming lefts to the head, a short right, high on the forehead, and finally a terrific overhand right to the jaw in the eighth, flopping to the canvas in a neutral corner. He took a count of nine and staggered across the ring after his antagonist. Archibald was waiting for him with another right that knocked Lou off his feet, but this time for no count.

Gevinson arose with an effort and staggered across the ring after his tormenter. Archibald was waiting for him with another right, and this time Lou didn't get up. Not that he didn't want to, but it would have been criminal to send him back into the face of Joey's punishing mitts.

Johnny Campo won on a technical knockout over Jimmy Fox, of Lynchburg, in the third round of a shceduled eight-round bout. Fox failed to answer the bell because of a nasty gash over his right eye. Johnny Dean knocked Al Dunbar, of New York, down three times in the first round to win by another technical kayo. Dunbar prone on the floor at the bell, failed to come out for the second. Carroll Dell won a split decision over Sam Bracala; Kid Hooey, Washington Negro, outpointed Johnny Cooper, of Baltimore, and "Killer" Lamar defeated technical knockout in the third over King Kong.

70,000 See British Win Track Meet

Amass 41 Points to Defeat U. S. Team at London.

By Scotty Reston.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

London, Aug 2.—Seventy thousand Britons jammed White City Stadium today to see the United States wandering track and field athletes but at the end of three hours of mediocre competition they decided their own team was pretty good.

Winning four events and placing in most of the others, the British beat out the United States all-star aggregation and 15 other nations with a total of 41 points as the American aces gave disappointing performances. The United States finished second with 32 points while Hungary counted 19 and Sweden, 18.

The great crowd, due partly to the national bank holiday, came close to not seeing the highly advertised battle between young Archie San Romani of Emporia, Kans., teachers and England's Stanley Wooderson.

Changing his plans to go straight to Stockholm to compete with another American team, the Kansas miler was met at Plymouth by an airplane which was to bring him to White City in time for his clash with Wooderson. But when he landed from the Queen Mary, he discovered that Stockholm officials, who are paying his expenses, objected to his competing in London.

He got into the plane regardless and then almost crashed in landing at Heston Airport. He finally got his status fixed so he could run, however, but actually Wooderson did all the running.

The little Briton stayed back until three-quarters of the race was over. He then moved out in front of Miklos Szabo, of Hungary, to win by 20 yards in 4:15.8. Meanwhile, San Romani started sixth and stayed there until the last lap. He managed to pull up to fifth but never threatened to do better.

Little Ben Johnson, Columbia University's captain last spring, lived up to predictions, however, by scoring the only double of the meet. He won the 100-yard sprint in 9.8 and came back to account for the 220 in 21.7 with C. B. Holmes and A. W. Sweeney, of Great Britain, running second and third, respectively, in both events.

Ken Carpenter and Cornelius Johnson, America's Olympic champions in the discus throw and high jump, respectively, won their specialties. Carpenter tossed the discus 162 feet 8 inches and Johnson cleared the bar at 6 feet 5 inches.

The other American favorites failed to show the class they exhibited at home. George Varoff, holder of the recognized pole vault record of 14 feet 6½ incres, couldn't get over 13 feet and the best Elroy Robinson could do in the half-mile was fourth.

Pole vault—Won by A. Proksch (Austria); second, J. Muller (Germany); third, F. R. Webster (Great Britain); tie for fourth between P. Bacsalmasi (Hungary), and A. Schneider (Poland); sixth, George Varoff (United States). Height, 13 feet 4½ inches.

Javelin—Won by L. Attervall (Sweden); second, G. Sule (Estonia); third, Robert Peoples (United States). Distance, 220 feet 10 inches.

Shot put—Won by G. Berth (Sweden); second, J. Daranyi (Hungary); third, Ray Allee (United States). Distance, 49 feet 4½ inches.

Broad jump—Won by R. Toomsalu (Estonia); second, J. Tiltai (Hungary); third, A. Maffei; fourth, Ben Johnson (United States). Distance, 24 feet 4 inches.

440-yard run—Won by W. Roberts (Great Britain); second, C. R. Belcher (United States); third, Dennis Shore (South Africa). Time, 48.3 seconds.

Three-mile run—Won by P. D. Ward (Great Britain); second, J. Kelen (Hungary); third, J. Noji (Poland). Time, 14 minutes 28.8 seconds.

440-yard hurdles—Won by J. Kovacs (Hungary); second, Jack Patterson (United States); third, P. Joye (France). Time, 54.8 seconds.

220-yard dash—Won by Ben Johnson, United States; second, C. B. Holmes, Great Britain; third, A. W. Sweeney, Great Britain. Time, 21.7 seconds.

880-yard run—Won by K. Kucharski, Poland; second, F. R. Handley, Great Britain; third, F. Eichberger, Austria; fourth, Elroy Robinson, San Francisco. Time, 1 minute 52.8 seconds.

120-yard high hurdles—Won by D. O. Finlay, Great Britain; second, J. L. Thornton, Great Britain; third, Leroy Kirkpatrick, California. Time 14.5 seconds.

Mile—Won by Stanley Wooderson, Great Britain; second Miklos Szabo, Hungary; third, R. H. Thomas, Great Britain; fourth, L. Nillson, Sweden; fifth, Archie San Romani, Emporia, Kansas Teachers. Time, 4 minutes 15.8 seconds.

Sandlot Pick-ups

By Jack Munhall.

Baseball has a deadly lure for many . . . consider the case of GEORGE ("WHITEY") CRAWFORD, New Deal's slugging outfielder. Love of the national pastime caused this 20-year-old blond giant to leave home and family last winter on a lonely 3,000 cross-country trek to attend a baseball school in Los Angeles . . . TRUCK HANNAH, manager of the Los Angeles Angels in the Pacific Coast League, continuing an idea conceived in 1932 received approximately 200 boys with major league hopes into an odd sort of school . . . the most promising of the initial candidates were sifted and the desirables (WHITEY among them) were shipped to Catalina Island, training camp of the Chicago Cubs . . . there they lived meeting different strong Los Angeles semipro outfits six days a week . . . the opposition was attracted by a free passage from Los Angeles aboard a Wilmington Lines boat . . . (David Fleming, president of the Angels also owns the Wilmington Line) . . . and free board and room during its stay on the island . . . the games were played in the Avalon Statdium where the boys had all the advantage of the big leaguers . . . according to Whitey . . . unlimited balls, two umpires and plenty of good bats.

Once on the island it was up to the boys to show talent and a lack of it quickly cut them loose . . . WHITEY hit a fast pace in the earlier part of the winter season . . . which extends from November to March . . . but sluiced off in the late going and was finally released but not in disgrace . . . for only three of the squad were selected to be sent to Ponca City in the Western Association . . . an Angel farm . . . Before his departure the coach praised CRAWFORD, saying he possessed the best throwing arm in the group and encouraged him to keep trying as one did not become a major leaguer until released six or seven times. . . . After leaving the team WHITEY lingered in Los Angeles awaiting another chance . . . meanwhile accepting odd jobs which ran a wide gamut . . . he was a stevedore, street cleaner, soda jerker among others.

Here in the National City CRAWFORD is bruning up the league . . . batting at a terrific clip . . . leading the New Dealers in home runs and fielding his position in excellent style . . . WHITEY would like to go away to a winter school again this fall, but would prefer somewhere else rather than California, where the aspirants far exceed the facilities.

Post Notes on Fishin' By Bill Ackerman

Sunday at Ocean City there were 37 white marlin brought in by the offshore fishermen. This is probably the greatest number of these great fish ever to be brought in to any port in any one day. There is no doubt but what they are shoaled on the Jacks Pot, and that now is the time to go after them.

By Bill Ackerman.

At Ocean City, Md., the bluefish are biting better after the recent little blow—running as high as 150 to the boat. The white marlin have bunched on the Jacks Pot and are supplying sport that it would almost be impossible to better. Paul Townsend on his cruiser Jacpau landed two, 60 and 75 pounds. Fred Fletcher, fishing editor of the New York Daily Mirror, brought a 50-pounder to the boat in 30 minutes, and local parties accounted for five more, weighing 75, 90, 75, 60 and 63 pounds.

ACKERMAN

The high light of the week was the 85-pounder landed by 12-year-old Billy Savage. This youngster, with another small companion, had been towed out to the grounds in a small power dory by his father, where he was turned loose to hunt for himself. That he did, and to good advantage, was plainly seen a short time later when the dory, with the spray flying from forward quarters, was noticed running in gradually tightening circles. With the help of his buddy and a hatchet, the fish was finally landed. Time, 40 minutes.

Jack Hurley, of Colonial Beach, says the catches of pan rock are good, and improving daily, although not up to what might reasonably be exected at this time of the year. Some perch, spot and small weaks, and for the past few days the catches of hardheads have been noticeably better.

The northwest wind, according to Capt. G. D. Somervell at Irvington, Va., slowed up the catches some, but the weaks and hardheads came right back as soon as it was over. There are no blues at Windmill Point, although any day now is likely to see them get started. By August 8 of last year they were going good.

At Gloucester Point they have slowed down considerably—strikes coming only at long intervals. Catches of hardheads, spot and weaks, however, are runnig large. Capt. T. S. Clopton says they are there and it will be only a few days before they strike again.

The date was set this past week for a sporting event that holds just as much interest for dog lovers as it does for upland hunters—the Fall Field Trials—and it is the twenty-fifth annual running of this classic by the National Capital Field Trial Club, of Washington.

Frank Kidwell, whose Porter raised and trained pointer won the all age in the Spring Trials, was appointed chairman of the grounds committee, which at present is working hard to find suitable grounds to stage a running that will probably draw the largest list of entries in the history of the club.

The three stakes will be run in the usual order, starting early in the morning of October 29 with the all age, which will permit the running of several heats in the Derby before dark so that the others will be through in time to start the hunting dog stake about 10:30 on the morning of October 30. The spring running of this stake was won by Ford E. Young's Valient Three Spot for the third consecutive time.

Edgar Bowen, of Solomons, was host at the current monthly meeting of the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair Association. Wise indeed was he whose idea disposed of the business at hand before the adjournment to the festive board. A board that fairly groaned with the weight of great platters of luscious chicken, fried to to a crinkly rich brown; dozens upon dozens of soft crabs, done to the exact degree of crispness; broiled weakfish, blanketed fried oysters—but why go further with the gruesome details of the slaughter of bay country viands, instead, let's just say a grand, grand time was had by all.

With the work that has been accomplished and the many interesting plans that are taking shape, there is no doubt that the fair, to be held at Solomons on September 18 and 19, will far surpass the initial effort of last year, when 2,500 anglers had the frolic and feast of their lives. This year will probably see twice that many, gathered for the two days at Solomons in boats from every point on the upper bay.

Boats will be at a premium, if you have any idea of attending, put in your reservation now and make your party of a size that will fill the capacity of the boat without crowding. There is to be no advance in prices for the fair. The one thing to remember, though, is the period for which the boat is chartered, and if the fish don't start to bite until it is almost time to come in, don't hold another party, who has engaged it for another period of time, waiting on the dock.

Have you ever witnessed the disgust with which an angler reels in a line broken by a big fish, because it had not been dried properly, or perhaps layed against some bit of rusty steel in a disorderly tackle box? Keep it in mind on your next fishing trip, if you have. Test your lines and leaders before fishing, it will pay dividends in the way of big fish.

Turner Signs Pacific Coast Grapple Stars

Will Appear Here Thursday Night on Cox-Sledge, Dusek-Russell Card.

New faces from the Pacific Coast will decorate the supporting card for the double wind-up wrestling bouts Thursday night at Griffith Stadium between Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, and Bill Sledge and Ernie Dusek and Reb Russell.

Dr. Len Hall, the "Great One," who maintains that he is the legitimate world's champion, will meet Mayes McLean, the former all around college athlete, is one of the 30-minute brawls which may rival in interest the double wind-up bouts. Dr. Hall is fresh from California victories.

Walter Podolock, a sensation on the Coast, meets Fischer, the former Rutgers athlete, and Binitiri Larue, the champion of France, takes on Abie Coleman, the clownish Jewish grappler.

A campaign for new faces to satisfy the customers is being waged by Promoter Joe Turner.

Promoter Turner also announced that ladies' night will be observed Thursday, all feminine fans to be admitted free, provided they pay their 15 cents tax.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Work Higher Led by Steel in Slow Trading; Wheat and Cotton Lower.

New York, Aug. 2.—Dog days began with a stock turnover of less than three-quarters of a million shares, dullness with an inclination to decline in Government bonds, and an irregularly higher price movement in stocks. Grains and cotton were down. September wheat closed 1½ cents lower at 115 cents a bushel.

Stock prices were generally firm as an indicator of indifference to political developments, probably because of lassitude. Implications of the Black-Connery measure are bad for securities of all kinds. The possibilities in China also are none too good for the peace of mind of security holders, but the markets have gone through a hardening process with respect to alarms of all kinds, military, political and economic.

All official authority on business indicates that, while some recession took place in June and July, signs of improvement are appearing and at least the rate of operations is running higher than a year ago. The steel industry this week, according to the American Iron & Steel Institute, will rise to 85.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 84.3 per cent last week, an unusually high rate for this time of year. Whatever the eventual effect of the wage and hour, plus production fixing provisions of the Black-Connery measure may be, if the bill becomes law, industry is now having some respite from its labor troubles.

Steel Operations Rise to 85.5 Per Cent

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Operations in steel industry for the current week advanced 1.2 points to 84.3 er cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operation averaged 67.3 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 71.4 per cent.

Steel Common.

The favorable steel estimate helped to move Steel common, which had been firm throughout. In the last hour the stock advanced robustly to a new high price on this movement. Steel sold around 120. Chrysler, United States Rubber and General Motors hardened. All the rubber and tire stocks pushed forward. Some of the metals also were well taken. International Nickel climbed, in spite of the holiday in the London market.

Miscellaneous stocks to rise were Case, Loew's, Cash Register, Underwood and Continental Baking A. Attention was given Rolling Mill and National Steel. In the railroad section the losses outnumbered the gains. Southern, Central and Baltimore & Ohio dropped.

Profits and Dividends.

Last year the stock market clearly was anticipating higher profits and larger dividends. It had excellent grounds for such expectations, for trade volume had been rising steadily for more than a year, the rise in costs had not yet overtaken the fast moving profit larger sales volume, and the undistributed profits tax insured higher dividend payments. While it cannot be said that the outlook for future corporation profits and stock prices is dark, the horizon of further increase is definitely lower.

Most corporations now have published their results for second quarter and first six months. Actual profits turn out to have been considerably larger than a year ago, but the rate of gain was nearly twice as great in the first three months as it was in the second three months. Probably more plants actually were shut down in first quarter than in second quarter, so it may be assumed that the declining profit margin in second quarter reflected higher wages, shorter hours, and rising costs of materials more than it did interruption to operations.

Safety First.

Senator Pat McCarran can be witty even in his correspondence with the Farmers National Grain Association. Replying to the charges that no hearings on his 70-car-length train bill ever were held and to other obvious objections to the measure, just passed by the Senate, the Senato said: "The bill seeks to protect life and limb and has no other motive.'" That also seemed to be the sole motive of the court packing scheme and is the object of the wage-hour fixing bill. While its experiments in the field of safety may prove to be costly to taxpayers and to American industry, there will be at least some gain if Senators permanently cease to meddle with economics. That field can be left to the experts in the administrative branch of the Government.

General Tire.

Although it did not insist, as it should have done, upon the publication of a quarterly statement, the Stock Exchange did get a promise from General Tire & Rubber for half yearly profits accounts, as a consideration for listing the shares. General Tire accordingly has published its first six months' account, the value of which is diminished by the fact that no comparative figures are shown for last year. In the six months ended May 31, the company apparently earned $1.76 a share on stock now outstanding. At the end of July General Tire finished the liquidation of dividend arrears on the preferred stock.

Alleghany.

A few more facts are coming to light on the famous case of the Stock Exchange's listing committee's refusal to list the certificates of deposit for Alleghany bonds. The certificates merely would have been evidence of the holding of bonds already on the Stock Exchange trading list, and why the exchange should continue trading in the actual bonds and refuse listing for evidence of ownership of the bonds is a bit too much for the unpracticed mind. The fear of incurring the displeasure of some bureaucrat or Congressman at Washington naturally caused the listing committee to take the advice of Mr. Hoxsey, who recently had rather a tough time of it before the Wheeler committee.

President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, a past president of both the District and national associations, will be in attendance at the meeting and chairmen of the District association's standing committees, also contemplate attending.

President Groom has announced that the local association's council of administration at a recent meeting, selected The Homestead, Hot Springs, Va., as the meeting place for the association's 1938 convention.

Mr. Groom stated the convention dates had been set for June 9-11, inclusive, but that those attending would go by special train in the late afternoon of June 8, arriving during the evening, and having a daylight view of the Allegheny Mountains. The return trip on Sunday, June 12, will also be in the afternoon.

This travel plan was a feature of this year's convention, and was so well received that the council decided to adopt it for next year's meeting. Arrangements are being made to make this assembly one of the largest ever held. President Groom said the convention chairmen would be named at the association's midwinter meeting in January.

A. I. B. Plans.

Plans for the new educational year of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, have been discussed by the chapter's board of governors serving for the latest administrative year. The educational committee of the chapter, headed by Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co., latest past president of the organization, has also held an initial conference. William H. Laughlin, Washington Loan & Trust Co., present chapter president, presided at the board meeting.

Washington Chapter stands high among those of the Nation. It has always stressed the importance of an educational program for the banking profession. Increased interest in professioal training in banking is reflected in attendance at the Graduate School of Banking conducted by the institute in cooperation with Rutgers University.

The first class in this course for adult bankers was graduated recently. Its students, 191 bank and trust department executives, completed this postgraduate course which supplements the institute's local training schedules. Incidentally, Mr. Harold Stonier, New York, educational director of the institute an director of the graduate school, has been honored by the university with its award for initiative and constructive endeavor in education, in recognition of his work in organizing and developing the school.

Mackubin, Legg Booklet.

Mackubin, Legg & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, with a branch office in Washington, are distributing a booklet on "Labor," prepared by Albert W. Thorpe, manager of the firm's investment management department.

The concluding paragraph says: "Since the outcome of the American labor movement is fraught with uncertainties, the investor must recognize it as a primary force bearing on his future financial welfare. Sound investment policy dictates, therefore, the necessity of careful analysis of labor costs and labor relations with their ever-changing effect on the earnings of American industries, and the employment of experienced and constant research to avoid too much concentration of funds in enterprises having high labor costs or unfavorable labor relations."

as well as in the principal commodity exchanges. With main offices in New York and Boston and branches in Springfield, Mass., and Portland, Me., Hayden, Stone & Co. rank as one of the largest commission houses in Wall street and carry on, also, an extensive investment banking and underwriting business.

It concludes that while some further curtailment can be expected, business promises to hold well above last year's level and, what is more important, the general situation is indicative of a considerable upturn by fall.

Secretary Donald W. Larson, of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, has left for a two weeks' vacation in Minnesota.

R. E. Bowie, vice president of the Security Trust Co., Wheeling, W. Va., has been elected president of the West Virginia Fiduciary Society.

Assistant Cashier Francis E. Robey, of the Bank of Commerce & Savings and second vice president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is back from a two-weeks' West Indian cruise.

2 Women Die, 8 Persons Hurt In Car Crashes

Two Autos Collide in Fog Near Fairfax; Another Hits Underpass.

Two women met death and eight persons were injured in automobile accidents in nearby Fairfax County yesterday.

Mrs. Martin P. Dangers, 34, of Philadelphia, was killed when an automobile driven by her husband, Fred Dangers, 34, collided with an automobile driven by Fred Bollo, 19, of Toms Creek, Va., on the Lee highway, not far from Fairfax. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Georgetown Hospital.

Miss Hazel Sheppard, 17, of Greensboro, N. C., was killed instantly when a car in which she was riding with her brother and her sister-in-law smashed against an underpass on the Washington-Richmond highway.

Driver of the car was Mrs. L. H. Sheppard, her sister-in-law, who suffered head injuries. Her brother, L. H. Sheppard, was cut and bruised and Miss Pauline Painter, 21, of Greensboro, a passenger in the car, suffered a fractured skull and was in critical condition in Alexandria Hospital.

Police said Mrs. Sheppard apparently lost control of the car, and her husband seized the wheel just before the crash against the underpass.

In the first accident, both drivers apparently were blinded by a dense early-morning fog. Dangers suffered bad cuts, and a passenger in their car, Mrs. Bessie Schmehl, of Philadelphia, suffered head lacerations.

At Georgetown Hospital, where all the victims were taken, physicians said Bollo was injured internally; Miss Tillie Bartha, also of Toms Creek, a passenger, suffered head injuries, and Julia Bollo, another passenger, suffered head injuries and lacerations.

Stanley Egelnick, 3, of 2206 Evarts street northeast, suffered a fractured left leg and cuts yesterday when he was knocked down by an automobile in the 2600 block of Twenty-fourth street northeast. The child was taken to Sibley Hospital.

Police said that Ralph F. Wurtz, 37, of 2910 Twenty-fifth street northeast, was driving the car.

Richard A. Isreal, of Arlington, Va., was confined in Emergency Hospital last night, the victim of a freak accident.

According to police, he was riding in an automobile at Eighteenth and M streets northwest when the car struck several parked machines. Isreal was thrown from the auto to the street.

Attendants at the hospital said Isreal suffered severe head injuries and considered his condition serious.

William D. Resmonds, 39, of Cherrydale, Va., who said he was a close friend of the injured man, was charged with reckless driving after reporting the accident to police.

Homer S. Durden, 1650 Harvard street northwest, a senior economist employed in the cotton division of the Department of Agriculture, was recovering in a hospital in Augusta, Ga., yesterday from injuries suffered when his truck was sideswiped by an auto according to friends here.

The accident occurred near Swainsboro, Ga. Durden's inuries were not believed to be serious, according to advices here.

Woman Gets 5 Years For Extortion Letter

Los Angeles, Aug. 2 (AP).—Mrs. June Bates, 38, mother of four children, was sentenced today to five years in prison for trying to extort $500 from John Boles, actor. "If I had intended to extort," she told Federal Judge Leon Yankwich, "I would have asked for $1,000."

N.Y. Poultry Czar, Aides Admit Theft

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Arthur (Tootsie) Herbert, 38, "the poultry czar," and two other men, on trial for embezzlement, abruptly changed their pleas to guilty today.

David Davidstone, 38, president of the Chicken Driver, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, No. 167, and Harry Frankel, 43, secretary-treasurer, joined the immaculately clad Herbert in admitting that they embezzled thousands of dollars from the union. Facing terms ranging up to 40 years, they will be sentenced August 16.

"This is the end of the key figure in the poultry racket," Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey said. "Herbert has been using his union position (business agent) to dominate a great industry, raise the cost of poultry in this city and cause untold misery to merchants and workers alike."

Labor Will Oppose Ban on Picketing

The Central Labor Union last night voted to oppose the Palmisano and McReynolds resolutions prohibiting picketing of Government buildings and foreign embassies.

Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the Painters Union, denounced the resolutions as "an unheard of" violation of labor's rights. He declared that the Painters Union, now on strike on Postoffice and Internal Revenue Buildings, are actually picketing the contractors and not the Government.

At an election to fill unexpired terms, Charles B. McClosky, of the Bakers Union, was elected a vice president, and D. C. Dow, of the Plumbers Union, named a trustee.

Lewis on Down Grade, Tom Girdler Asserts

Wianno, Mass., Aug. 2 (AP)—The Cape Cod Standard Times today quoted Tom Girdler, head of Republic Steel, as saying John L. Lewis was "on the down grade" and as predicting failure for the aims of his committee for industrial organization.

"The real trouble is over," he was quoted. "Lewis is definitely on the down grade. He has lost the faith of the working man, capital and public because he is an irresponsible party. There may be a few outbreaks here and there, but the big fight is won."

Hospital Fined $56 For Not Treating Poor Holdup Hero

Chicago, Aug. 2 (AP).—Judge George B. Weiss today fined Lakeview Hospital $56 for failure to give adequate treatment to a wounded civilian hero who killed two robbers in a gun battle.

The trial was based on an old Illinois law. The central figure was Lige Debowski, who was in a liquor store last July 17 when two gunmen entered. He snatched a pistol from one and fatally wounded both of them before he fell with five bullets in his body.

Debowski was given first aid at Lakeview, but later was removed to the county hospital, a public infirmary.

Assistant State's Attorney Morris Meyers charged that attending physicians "refused to give him any further treatment unless they were given $150."

Debowski, an unemployed chef, is recovering.

The union said 8,000 drivers and helpers were involved.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson immediately declared a state of emergency and ordered the director of public safety to summon all available police for duty.

A. F. L. Resolution Cites NLRB Bias

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 2 (AP).—Removal of members and officers of the National Labor Relations Board for allegedly "supporting and upholding the Committee for Industrial Organization" was demanded tonight on the floor of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor's fifty-second convention.

George T. Douglas, of Bradford, organizer for the Boot and Shoe Workers Union, introduced a resolution charging the NLRB "with total disregard for all rules of evidence, fair play and elementary demands of justice."

Douglas obtained permission to have the union's counsel "prove the charges" when the resolution comes up for vote, probably Wednesday.

The resolution charged the NLRB was "biased and partisan," had "encouraged industrial discontent by interjecting itself into situations where no clear cause for intervention existed," and had "demonstrated its inability to handle the current industrial-labor situation."

Funds Sought For Flood Dam On Savage River

President Promises Study of Project to Ease Potomac Pressure.

Allocation of funds to start construction of the Savage River dam, which would help control Potomac River floods in the Washington area, was asked of President Roosevelt yesterday by Representatives Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, and David J. Lewis, of Maryland.

Following their White House visit, the Representatives said the President would make a study of the War Department appropriations bill to find from what sources the necessary funds could be allocated.

Cost of the project has been set by Army engineers at $2,700,000, an increase over the $1,600,000 originally estimated, because of what Randolph said were "lessons learned from the 1936 and 1937 floods." Army engineers have completed their survey of the project, for which $150,000 was made available.

Changes in original plans, made necessary by the more recent overflowings of the Savage and Potomac Rivers, include increasing the height of the proposed dam by 10 feet, thereby providing 20,000 acre-feet of storage space, and a greater spillway surface.

With the Savage River in its present uncontrolled state, Randolph said, industries along the river have now reached their peak. Some of the existing ones desire to expand, he said, but find it impossible without a controlled and even water flow. Construction of the dam would permit present industries to increase their capacity and new ones to enter the valley, the West Virginian told reporters.

The dam would be located between Piedmont, W. Va., and Westernport, Md.

"It would have a tremendous flood control value all the way down the Potomac, from the mouth of the Savage to Washington," he said.

Industrials Lead Advance on Curb

Softness in the utility sector dropped American Gas & Electric ⅜ to 35⅞, Electric Bond & Share lost ¼ at 20⅝. Northern States Power "A" yielded ¾ to 25¼ and Niagara Hudson gave up ⅜ to 13⅞. Other losses included Newmont Mining, off 2¼ at 105¾ and Wright Hargreaves off ⅛ at 6¼.

Bureau Will Air Charges Made On Paint Job

Union Complains Laborers Used for Skilled Work on Postoffice.

Claims by the Painters' Union that contractors handling the postoffice painting are using laborers to do work which union painters should do, will be aired at the Labor Department tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Purpose of the public hearing tomorrow is to settle the question of whether under the Bacon-Davis act, laborers shall do such work as washing down walls, sizing, erecting scaffolds and arranging dropcloths.

The union does not cltim the exclusive right to do such incidental work on a painting job, according to John Locher, secretary of the Washington Building Trades Council, but insists that union pay should be paid to men doing this type of work. The union rate is $11 a day.

"The contractors can put horseshoers to work if they want, on painting jobs," Locher said. "We don't care who they hire. But we insist under the law they must pay the full union scale of $1.57 an hour to everyone they hire."

General contractors and painting contractors have been invited to attend tomorrow's meeting. The Master Builders Association also will send representatives.

Involved in the outcome of the conference is the fate of the Internal Revenue Building, which has been hit by strikers for the same reason as caused the postoffice walkout. Members of Painters Union Local 368 have returned to all jobs but the postoffice and the Internal Revenue Buiding.

200 Midshipmen Leave on Cruise

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—A detachment of 200 members of the junior class of midshipmen at the Naval Academy today were en route to Newport, R. I., and the international yacht races.

The group left on a month's training cruise aboard the gunboat Erie, and the destroyers Claxton, J. Fred Talbott, Roper, Fairfax, Jacob Jones and Manley. The party was the last third of the junior class to make the same cruise.

The itinerary of the cruise was changed today to allow the midshipmen to see the yacht races. They will visit the Navy Proving Grounds, Dahlgren, Va., on the return trip to the academy. Previously, the ships visited Dahlgren before going to Newport.

Highest Court Gets Aluminum Co. Case

By the Associated Press.

The Aluminum Co. of America carried to the Supreme Court yesterday its fight against antitrust proceedings filed by the Government in New York.

It asked the tribunal to pass on a decision by three circuit judges at Philadelphia that the Department of Justice could proceed with the suit in the New York Federal Court.

The three-judge court, constituting a special expediting tribunal, decided that proceedings there against the Aluminum Co. and 62 other defendants were not similar to action taken in the Pittsburgh Federal District Court in 1912 against the Aluminum Co. alone.

Doctor on Trial Today On Young Girl's Charges

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—Dr. Armen Greenhut, middle-aged Dundalk, Md., physician, will go on trial in circuit court here tomorrow, charged with carnal knowledge of a girl under 14.

Fifty extra jurymen were on call today for the trial, which was brought here from Baltimore County on a change of venue.

The Baltimore County grand jury indicted the doctor after policemen testified they and the girl's aunt went into the physician's office after hearing the girl cry for aid. The policemen and the aunt will testify for the prosecution.

First Lady Says Stunt By Cousin Helped Work

By the Associated Press.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt credited a take-off by her Republican cousin, Alice Roosevelt Longworth, yesterday as "the most helpful criticism" she has received of her radio broadcasts.

Beginning a column of questions and answers in the August Democratic Digest, publication of the party women's division, Mrs. Roosevelt wrote that after watching Mrs. Longworth mimic her, she realized she had many things to correct in her radio technique.

Two Labor Chieftains Deny Break With Lewis

By the Associated Press.

Harvey Fremming, president of the Oil Field, Gas and Refinery Workers, said yesterday his union was "absolutely in accord with John L. Lewis' program."

Fremming made that statement in reply to reports that he was among six leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization who were near a split with Lewis.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union and C. I. O. secretary, also denied there was any rift in the organization.

Donations Sought For 11 Children at Camp Bald Eagle

One hundred and fourteen children now are encamped at the Bald Eagle Health Camp of the District Tuberculosis Association, but there is room for 11 more.

Mrs. E. R. Grant, director of the association, reported yesterday that $535.52 is needed to "fill the camp," and that she has $14.48 toward hospitalization of the 115th child. Only $50 is required to keep a child in camp during the remaining five weeks of the season.

Since the contributions began to pour into her office several weeks ago, Mrs. Grant said, not any has made the office feel more grateful than the 50 cents received yesterday from a working woman who had saved to make her donation possible.

Peace Cross Area Traffic Jam Scored

Week-end traffic congestion at Peace Cross in nearby Prince Georges County, Md., was condemned yesterday by the Keystone Automobile Club.

Acording to George E. Keneipp, club manager, a recent survey showed motorists attempting to reach Washington Boulevard and the Defense Highway are delayed as much as an hour and a half at Peace Cross.

"During the past four Sundays," said Keneipp, "members of hte Keystone Motor Patrol have been stationed at the Peace Cross intersection, checking conditions and placing in the hands of motorists cards to be filled out stating the length of the delay experienced.

"We have checked an average of more than 4,000 cars each Sunday, beginning late in the afternoon and continuing until 10 p. m. We find that motorists are being delayed anywhere from 15 minutes to an hour and a half. The average delay is about 35 minutes. Frequently, the line of traffic backed up along the Defense Highway is more than 6 miles long."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The laws are made for justice not for punishment. We have all seen players who were so lacking in sportsmanship as virtually to smack their lips when an opponent made an insufficient bid, or other innocent mistake. West, in the hand shown below, was that type of player and got exactly what was coming to him.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

Match-point duplicate.

South decided his distribution was too good to pass and, therefore, opened the proceedings with one heart. West made a very bad call over the one heart; obviously, he should have doubled for a take-out, but instead he mumbled "two spades." North, who heard the spade part but missed the quantity, blithly raised to two hearts and West, alert to such opportunities, gloatingly barked "Insufficient!" Poor North was informed that West had bid two spades over the one heart, and that he must now make a bid sufficient to outbid two spades. This put North into quite a quandary; he realized that his partner was barred from the auction and, having no idea as to how much strength he had, North could not tell whether a game in hearts would be a laydown, or impossible. Rather than miss what might well be a sure game, he took the bull by the horns and bid four hearts. East and South passed and West, who had been praying for just such an outcome, bellowed "Double." Since he himself was not vulnerable and opponents were, it certainly appeared that he could make more points by doubling than by persisting to a game of his own.

For once, however, justice prevailed, and West had the shock of his life when he saw the dummy, after laying down the spade King. There was nothing to the play—the perfect fit between the North and South hands resulted in a lay-down for an extra trick.

The unkindest cut of all was that when West examined the four hands he found that he could have made six spades on his own account against the opening lead of a heart by North.

Inquiry Asked in Arrest Of Film Man by Japan

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Officials of Fox Movietone News said today they had asked the State Department at Washington to make inquiries concerning the reported arrest of Bonney Powell, Far East director for Fox, by Japanese in Peiping.

Powell, 35, has operated in China for Fox many years. His wife and child live with him in China.

A report from China said he was arrested by Japanese soldiers while engaged in photographic work at the scene of fighting between Japanese and Chinese troops.

Months ago the Goodyear engineering and development staffs—with the leading facilities, resources and talent in the tire industry—sailed into this problem, to make brains and ingenuity offset soaring costs.

And what a tire they produced! Big, tough, thrift built into every inch of it—no wonder the great new "R-1" is the tire-sensation of recent years!

We used every lesson of long-wearing tire construction learned in building more than 23,000,000 Pathfinders. And applied the principles of safety, sure traction and amazing mileage from the famed "G-3" All-Weather—most popular tire in the world.
